

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. A LIBRARY TONIC

BY GEORGE PARKER WINSHIP

Librarian of the Harry Elkins Widener Collection
Harvard College Library

*An address delivered before the graduating class of the Library School, The New York Public Library
June 8, 1917*

THE way in which the free library has come to be recognized as a necessary part of the equipment of every progressive community in the United States can be easily traced. Its direct pedigree goes back to the seventeenth century parsonage, which housed the local library. The minister, if he were well-to-do, bought the books as he wanted them for his own use. If he was poor — and the association of position and condition was not as inevitable then as it afterward became — a few of the parishioners sometimes bought a library as part of the inducement offered to some promising young college graduate whom they wished to settle over themselves. When the parish was one that required missionary help, The New England Company or Dr. Bray's Associates or The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts could be induced to send over from London a box full of books. In one way or another the local clergyman almost always possessed a library, and the inscriptions on the flyleaves of those volumes that have come down to the present day show that they were frequently borrowed, and occasionally were not returned.

From an early date nearly every flourishing settlement contained a stock of books, and the townsfolk were in the habit of taking these without having to pay for the privilege. An idea thus became firmly established, that reading matter is a thing to be had for the asking, and with very little sense of favor in the asking. This notion has persisted among the native stock, and spread widely in the virgin soil of foreign extraction.

After parish and town ceased to be synonymous, the subscription libraries were organized. These served their communities as long, and only so long, as the habitual patrons belonged to the same financial stratum. Those that survived the economic reconstruction of the early nineteenth century tended after a while to become local book clubs, whose permanence is assured by the fact that membership in them is a sign of social distinction.

The commercial, pay-as-you-take, "Circulating" libraries came into vogue after the subscription societies began to be regarded as somewhat exclusive organizations. These contributed largely to the spread of information during the decades when culture was first generally recognized as a desirable thing in this country and they are still making a brave effort to supply cheap reading for those who cannot afford to buy new books and who prefer to pay in order to get what they want. For some reason or other, however, these strictly business purveyors of literature have not been successful in meeting the increasingly widespread demand for a steady supply of readable books.

About forty years ago the craving created by this demand called for some substantial alleviation. The natural way to satisfy it was suggested by the free institutions which had been founded in a few of the older towns by far-sighted benefactors. These were serving admirably the requirements of a small and studiously minded constituency that frequented them. During the later decades of the last century their attendants began to report a steadily increasing number of unfamiliar faces, and the habitual occupants of established places in accustomed corners complained of intruders. At about the same time, less favored communities learned that a library was one of the principal tests of civic respectability which were being applied by young people when looking for a place in which to set up a home.

What would have happened if a number of differing communities had been permitted to work out each in its own way a means of meeting this situation would be as interesting as fruitless a speculation. Instead of this, the Public Library Movement was started. Out of an inchoate sense of general desire was created a movement of extraordinary power. A natural evolution was transformed into an epidemic.

Through the public spirited activities of a small group of energetic, imaginative men and women, practically every self-respecting municipality in this country has come into the possession of a free reading room and circulating library. Not content with this achievement, the same keen foresight and devotedness to the cause developed a new profession. The prime-movers perceived that it was as necessary to provide workers as it was places where there was work to be done. They started schools in order that there might be a supply to meet the demand for persons who would know how to handle the mysterious details which are the machinery of this institution. Besides the details, they inculcated certain ideals of service and of duty to the community which have given to library workers as a class their most distinguishing characteristics. These came to be the accepted tenets of the fraternity, and they made of it a profession.

The library movement ran its course within the span of a single generation. Those who created it have only recently given up the active leadership of what is, in a double sense, their profession. Its present apostles are those who were trained in the early days of enthusiastic achievement, when a daily record could be kept for new foundations, when experiments were reported and theories devised at each annual conference. To their successors is now being entrusted the not less important if more humdrum task of administering the results of these achievements and experiments, without the inspiration of novelty or the fillip of sceptical criticism. The position of the library is secure, but its permanent relation to the scheme of community life is still to be worked out.

The profession has won recognition, but it has also lost the incentive which invigorated its recent, youthful past. Librarianship is in need of a tonic. It wants something which shall put more alertness into the every-day routine, the weekly grind at detail, something which shall make it easier to hold attention to tasks which inevitably tend to cultivate desultory habits.

It may be that this tonic will be found in an increasing familiarity with books. Mere acquaintance with their more or less readable, or informing, contents will not serve the purpose. The contents furnish too large a part of the matter for casual conversation with library patrons ever to be very exhilarating to those to whom this is a part of the day's occupation. Knowledge of the backs of books, the physical characteristics by which they are judged as instinctively as are the features of a strange person, will not accomplish the desired end. Familiarity implies something different. It must be based upon qualities like those which make one fond of human friends, for their own peculiar individual selves.

The opportunity to become familiar with the personality of individual books is coming as a by-product in the stage of the evolutionary process through which the libraries are now passing, that of the specialization of departments. This has already reached a point where the institution that is too small to have any subdivisions is itself regarded as belonging to a special class, requiring for its administrator peculiar aptitude and training. At the other extreme are the departments which set themselves up as independent organizations, like the libraries of the Hispanic and the Engineering Societies, of the Rockefeller and the Sage Foundations, of many private corporations and a few individuals. Between these are the public libraries, with their long accustomed children's room and the newest fad in Business Branches, whose nominal connection with the parent institution is maintained by a plenary dispensation as to all rules, regulations and printed forms. For each of these the attendant is expected to have a training as well as temperament adapted to the particular department. In this limitation to a special field lies the chance to distinguish among books and select those with which to become more intimately familiar.

Books, an article of commerce manufactured for sale, are for the most part merely the libraries' circulating medium. They are written and printed normally in order that they may be used. The more nearly they are used up, the better do they fulfill the purpose for which they exist. Those that survive, that cumber the shelves after readers have ceased to ask for them, rather than the volumes that are discarded because they are unfit to be given out again, are the real waste assets of a public library.

Besides the books that get used up and those that escape this fate because there are not enough people who want to look at them, there is another kind which have only a superficial resemblance to account for their association with the others. These are the volumes that should be preserved carefully, by any library that is fortunate enough to possess them. They ought not to be loaned or allowed to be read, except under special restrictions, and by those who appreciate their worth. These are the choice books, which are precious for some sentimental or curious reason. It occasionally happens that they also possess an intrinsic interest for readers or that ordinary students find useful information on their pages, but not often, and never is interest or information sufficient to justify unappreciative use. Ordinarily these books are merely curiosities. They are apt to be scarce and hard to come by, but not always. They are what is known in the trade as "collectors' books," which appear at irregular intervals in the second-hand booksellers' catalogues and in the auction rooms. They are the volumes which are sought for because they possess individuality, some sentimental association or unusual peculiarity, which gives them an artificial, but not on that account unreal or undeserved, value. They are the books with which acquaintanceship almost always leads to fondness.

Choice and precious books are not at all uncommon. I do not recollect ever having looked along the shelves of any library, small or large, without noticing some volume that deserved a better treatment than it was getting, or for which there was not a good claim for a place in the library's treasury. Askew in the corner of a Chicago stack was once the only copy as yet known of a drama written in America long before the English colonists settled here. A copy of the first English Prayer Book whose pages embodied much of the history of Bloody Mary's reign came from the mouldy basement of a New England University. In one of the most comfortable of little libraries the first editions of Kate Greenaway's early books, received with the rest of an elderly patron's lifetime accumulations, were found unharmed in the children's corner. I feel sure that this particular — more particular now — institution will get other and more valuable gifts, that each member of the staff will look at the books as they pass through her hands with a livelier interest, and that more children will enjoy looking at these spotless pages in their still fresh covers, because they are now treasured as precious possessions in a closed case, from which they are taken as a special favor or when some visitor is deemed worthy of honor.

The room in which such books are kept in the largest libraries, — Treasure Room or Reference Department, or best of all, the librarian's personal office — is recognized as an important and thoroughly useful feature of the institution. There is no reason why it should not be just as valuable, and probably it would be more helpful to staff and public alike, in the Branches and village libraries. The John Crerar Library is the only place where specimens of early Chinese printing are to be seen. These would interest fewer people at the Harlem Branch than the first thing printed at that river settlement, which might be as hard to find and actually as rare as the ancient Chinese work. The local thing will inevitably attract more visitors and have a greater value than any exotic, whenever the same care is taken to make it known. Shakespeare Quartos awaken the imagination of those who do not know about them less than any volume that was once the property of a local celebrity or an old woodcut of a town landmark.

Collecting books is not as proper a function for library workers as circulating or cataloguing them, but most people find it much more entertaining. It is a thing that each can do, for herself or for the institution, and there is nothing more likely to add to the fun of work that is all too apt to become routine. The newspaper reports give the impression that this is an expensive sport, but in reality it is still what it has long been — one of the leading poor man's pastimes. All that one needs to do is to pick a subject according to purse as well as inclination, and learn to bide one's time.

Chaucerian manuscripts and Windmill Psalters come high, and are worth all they cost in money, patience, and courage when the opportunity comes. Gutenberg Bibles, Columbus Letters and Shakespeare Folios are comparatively common books, but none the less luxuries, as are Stevenson first editions and the correct Pickwick in parts. There are scores of other writers, however, whose books are just about as well worth knowing intimately, and whose first or desirable editions may be secured for little more than the cost of patient searching. There are no end of subjects and localities about which enough has been written to make the quest exciting, most of which can be had for what the buyer will pay. One of these that crossed my path recently concerned one-legged men, and the collector told me many things that I am glad to know about the survivals of popular ballad literature. The game, like every game that is worth playing, has its element of danger for those who lack the power to resist temptation; but the start is easy, the rules are simple, and the lists are open the year around.

Two friends of mine collect children's books. One spends dimes to the other's dollars. Each gets his money's worth, in possessions and in fun. Bargains fall to one as often as to the other. Few strangers would find in either collection much amusement for an idle hour, but under the guidance of either owner, both are brimming with romance and legend and tales of hair-breadth escapes and captures. Another, whom all bookish folk revere, is buying any old thing that has a name which he does not recollect at the foot of the title-page. Thereby he is reconstructing the careers of a hundred worthy printers whose deeds deserve a record. A younger man is finding the search for the publications in which Robert W. Service's early poems appeared as tantalizing as it is difficult. Another is hunting for eighteenth century editions of the English classics because he cannot afford the twentieth century ones that he thought he wanted before he discovered the charm of old leather. One library, envious of a lucky rival, began buying political tracts of the period where it found that it could get the largest number for the smallest amount of money, and already it has what is probably an unapproachable collection of material for students of a not unimportant episode. Books are still the cheapest desirable thing in the world. All that is necessary in order to enjoy the possession of them is a little wall space, a restrained taste, and knowledge of what one wants.

MUSIC MANUSCRIPTS IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY JOHN RUSSELL HAYES

Immortal music in such fragile form;
Such precious manuscripts, — O guard them well!
What tenderness and passion must they hold,
What yearning aspiration, who may tell?
Here Wagner has inscribed with strong bold hand
The moving fire and ferment of his soul;
Here Mozart's notes minute and fairy-fine
Are woven in a heart-revealing scroll.
The glorious harmonies that Haydn knew,
The majesty of Bach's great organ-peal,
And Mendelssohn's melodious, pensive dreams, —
These wondrous pages touchingly reveal.

And does this yellowed stain tell where a tear
Fell from the old composer's brimming eye
As musingly from forth the keys he called Remembrances of magic days gone by?
Is this uncertain, wavering phrase the sign
Of some great tenderness that touched his heart;
And does this wistful wild cadenza show
His proud and splendid mastery of his art?

How may I tell the joy of that rich hour
When high above Manhattan's roar I heard
Immortal music sounding from the leaves
Of those old manuscripts all dim and blurred!

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of June, 1917, the Library received as gifts a total of 3,390 volumes, 8,906 pamphlets, 12 maps and 161 prints. Among the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following: From Mr. and Mrs. William N. Appel of Lancaster, Pa., the "Addresses and Writings of George F. Baer," including his argument before the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission, collected by his son-in-law, William N. Appel, privately printed, 1916; from Mr. William M. Baldwin of New York, 12 bound volumes of "Luther Burbank, his methods and discoveries and their practical application," prepared from his original field notes, covering more than 100,000 experiments made during forty years devoted to plant improvement, with the assistance of the Luther Burbank Society; from Mr. John Jay Chapman of New York, "Victor Chapman's letters from France," with memoir by John Jay Chapman; from Mrs. Joseph H. Choate of New York, "Pamphlets on the war, periodicals, reports of various institutions, etc.," 557 pieces in all; from Dr. H. Holbrook Curtis of New York, a collection of 135 volumes, including "The Pictorial Field Book of the Revolution" by Benjamin J. Lossing, etc.; from the Estate of Willard Fiske, the "Catalogue of the Petrarch collection," bequeathed by Willard Fiske to Cornell University; from Mr. Gordon Ireland of New York, a collection of Journals on "Philately," 547 pieces in all; from Mr. K. Y. Ling of New York, a collection of 74 volumes in the Chinese language; from Miss Helen Minshall of New York, the "Album national de la guerre publié par le Comité de la 'Fraternité des Artistes' sous le haut patronage de Monsieur Raymond Poincaré, Président de la République. Présenté par M. Léon Bonnat"; and from Mr. Charles Louis Palms of New York, his work entitled, "Rhodanthe, or The rose in the garden of the soul's delight," a poetic fantasy.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN JUNE, 1917

DURING the month of June, 1917, there were received at the Library 16,264 volumes and 9,639 pamphlets. (These figures include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 62,034. They consulted 167,671 volumes. Visitors to the Building numbered 222,113.

RECENT BOOKS OF INTEREST ADDED TO THE LIBRARY

INDUSTRIES AND INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Alford, Leon Pratt, editor. Manufacture of artillery ammunition; by members of the editorial staff of the American machinist... New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1917. xii, 765 p. illus. 8°. VFW

This admirable work—complete, practical, and carefully illustrated—was for the most part published originally in the American machinist. It is a record of detailed technique that will "aid Americans in producing their own munitions of war if occasion should ever arise and... show the excellent machining methods, machines, tools and appliances that have a much wider application in manufacturing than merely to make shells, cartridge cases, and fuses." The appendix includes some timely suggestions, based on 26 months' experience of the Allied nations, for the standardization and procurement of machine tools by the United States government.

Reviewed in Iron trade review, March 29, 1917.

American Wood Preservers Association. Handbook of wood preservation... Baltimore: Peters Pub. & Printing Co., 1916. v, 73 p. illus. 8°. VQY

From the time when garlic boiled in vinegar was used for preserving timber, to the present cheap and efficient methods is an interesting history. This handbook traces the development, tells about the various processes, discusses the merits of the different chemicals, the uses of preserved woods, with statistics indicating the extent of the industry. There are lists of dealers in supplies and equipment, also a directory of wood preserving establishments in the United States, Canada, and Mexico. A notable feature is the excellent bibliography of 18 pages.

Belden, Edgar S. Building superintendence for steel structures; a practical work on the duties of a building superintendent for steel frame buildings and the proper methods of handling the materials of construction... Chicago: American Technical Society, 1917. 95, 3 p. illus. 8°. VEH

Author is vice-president of the George A. Fuller Construction Company. Does not attempt to go into the theory of design, but confines himself to the problems of superintendence alone, making clear the engineering, legal, and practical knowledge required. Gives details regarding the inspection of the steel material in the shops and the proper method of storing until needed. The problems of erection are all treated—equipment required, foundations, the handling of the steel, riveting and painting. Closes with advice as to the proper organization of the force, how the superintendent should work with architect and owner, and what qualities a good superintendent should possess.

Brown, Harold Warner. Electrical equipment. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1917. xiii, 229 p. 8°. VGC

Unique in that it attacks the subject from the standpoint of the mechanical engineer. In addition to discussions of motors, generators, transformers, distribution systems, controlling and regulating apparatus, lightning arresters, measuring and indicating devices, there are chapters on storage batteries, illumination, the kinds of motors best adapted to particular purposes and costs, as well as a number of problems such as are met in actual practice. To facilitate study, data references are confined mainly to the Standard and the American handbooks, while Alexander Gray's Principles and practice of electrical engineering is depended upon for theory.

Burrell, George Arthur. Gasoline and how to use it. Boston: Oil Statistical Society, Inc. [cop. 1916.] 281 p. 16°.

Desk—Tech. Div.

Much information has been packed into this small handbook, the aim of which is to lessen ignorance and carelessness in the use of gasoline; "to assist the motorist in getting a full measure of power, and incidentally to give him pointers as to the running and lubrication of his automobile"; to inform farmers and manufacturers regarding gasoline and in what nature of machine to use it; "to give the student, or professional oil man the whole story of gasoline or petroleum—historically, scientifically, and practically"; and to describe some of its other uses, as in warfare, cleansing, and the paint and rubber industries. There is also information concerning gasoline substitutes, the use of alcohol and naphthalene as fuels, and the relative merits of benzol and gasoline. Well supplied with engineering data.

Croft, Terrell. Wiring for light and power; a detailed and fully illustrated commentary on the more important portions of the National Electric Code... New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 1917. xii, 426 p. 8°. VGM

"Doubtless, the Code comprises the most comprehensive collection of directions for electrical wiring and installation ever compiled. It includes sections specifying installation methods for wiring and equipment for nearly all services and purposes. Its principal function is to specify wiring-and-installation methods which will minimize fire hazard—and at the same time be economically feasible. Obviously, this is a broad field to cover. Hence, the rules of the Code should necessarily be, and are in many cases, very concise. In other words, the Code is almost wholly free from explanations or elaborations."

Mr. Croft, who has several other excellent handbooks to his credit, has in this practical and clearly written work supplied the desirable explanations and elaborations. Exceptionally well illustrated and indexed.

Dover, A. T. Electric traction: a treatise on the application of electric power to tramways and railways... New York: The Macmillan Company, 1917. xix, 667 p. illus. 8°. TPYM

A richly illustrated treatise of nearly 700 pages designed for engineers and advanced students. Treats of the mechanics of train movement; motors and their control; auxiliary apparatus; rolling stock; details of train movement; track and overhead construction; distributing systems and substations. Generating stations and transmission have, however, not been considered. Representative examples of modern

Durham, Harry William. Saws: their care and treatment... London: W. Rider & Son, Ltd. [1916.] viii, 272 p. illus. 12°. (Rider's technical series. no. 12.) VFV

Deals almost exclusively with the design, sharpening, setting, hammering and tensioning of circular and band-saws. There are chapters on sharpening machines, testing and strength of saws, and driving power required.

Fay, Henry. Microscopic examination of steel. New York: John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 1917. iv, 18 p., 31 pl. 8°. (Wiley engineering series. v. 3.) VIR

Author is professor of analytical chemistry in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and consulting engineer to the Watertown Arsenal. There are 18 pages of text, including brief directions for polishing and etching, as well as a short list of books; also a number of photographic reproductions on heavy plate paper.

"A reprint of material originally published by the United States Ordnance Department, representing the results of investigations at the Watertown Arsenal. The text is very brief and to the point, and the photographs are very good. It is a mere outline of metallographic methods illustrated by typical examples, and is intended particularly to help learners or workers in metallography who need some precise advice and instruction in the interpretation of results. It is admirably suited to serve this end, within the limits imposed." — Metallurgical and chemical engineering, May 1, 1917.

Franke, G. A handbook of briquetting... translated by Fred. C. A. H. Lantsberry... v. 1. London: Charles Griffin & Co., 1917. xxviii, 631 p. illus. 8°. VHV

The author of this very timely work, the most thorough on the subject, is professor of mining, ore-dressing, and briquetting in the Royal Bergakademie, Berlin; the translator is a well-known Carnegie Research Scholar. Volume 1 treats with commendable detail the briquetting of coals, brown coals, and other fuels, discussing their technical, legal, statistical and economical relations, but representing German practice only. Well supplied with practicable drawings. Volume 2, dealing with ores, metallurgical products, metal swarf, and agglomerations, will, it is stated, be published shortly. For an excellent review see the Iron and coal trades review, Jan. 12, 1917.

Greene, Carelton. Wharves and piers, their design, construction, and equipment... New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1917. vii-xiv, 248 p. illus. 8°. VDN

This timely work represents modern American practice, with particular attention to wooden wharf construction. The peculiar requirements and construction methods of a large number of actual structures are described. Chapter 6 deals with sheds; chapter 7 with equipment, comprising fenders, mooring devices, wharf drops, pavements, railroad tracks, and fire prevention; chapter 8 with cargo handling machinery. The appendix cites itemized costs of actual construction. The drawings, most of them dimensioned, are clearly executed.

Hunt, Caroline L., and HANNAH L. WESSLING. Bread and bread making in the home. Washington: Gov. Prtg. Off., 1917.

25 p. illus. 8°. (United States. — Department of Agriculture. Farmers' bulletin. no. 807.) Economics Div.

"This bulletin attempts to describe in simple terms the general principles on which bread making is based and suggests an easy standard method for making yeast-raised wheat bread in the ordinary household. It also indicates how this standard recipe may be modified to make different types of yeast-raised bread, and gives a few other recipes for breads made from other cereals than wheat or raised by other means than yeast."

Johnson, Joseph Esrey. Blast-furnace construction in America... New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1917. xi, 415 p. illus. 8°. VID

This comprehensive work, based partly upon investigations by the author, fills a long felt want in metallurgical literature. Enough of recent history is given to show the present trend of the art. Describes the handling of the raw materials, filling the furnace, the equipment of the boiler plant, blowing apparatus, hot blast stoves, stacks, cleaning and washing of the gas, handling the iron and cinder, auxiliaries, and general arrangement of the plant. Of especial note is the chapter on the dry blast. It is stated that a companion volume entitled The principles, operation and products of the blast furnace will be published in the near future.

Lanchester, F. W. The flying-machine from an engineering standpoint; a reprint of the "James Forrester" lecture, 1914, by permission of the Institution of Civil Engineers, including a discussion concerning the theory of sustentation and the expenditure of power in flight... London: Constable and Company, Ltd., 1916. viii, 135 p. illus. 8°. VDY

The author, who is a well-known member of the British Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, states that for military reasons very little of a technical character has been added since the beginning of the war to the stock of public information concerning advances in aerodynamic knowledge and the art of aeroplane construction. His "James Forrester" lecture comprises the greater portion of the book and attempts to epitomize the subjects as they stood early in 1914.

Leighou, Robert B. Chemistry of materials of the machine and building industries. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 1917. xv, 449 p. illus. 8°. VOE

Intended for students who have a knowledge of elementary general chemistry, this carefully written volume of over 400 pages aims to emphasize the chemical properties of materials from the standpoint of the user rather than from that of the manufacturer. Chapters on primary and storage batteries, and on hydrometry have been included. The bibliographical footnotes and the lists of books and periodical references at the chapter endings make this an excellent reference for both the technical and the public library. Author is associate professor of chemistry in the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Meyers, George Julian. Steam turbines; a treatise covering United States naval practice... Annapolis, Md.: United States Naval Institute, 1917. vii, 246 p. f°. VFK

This elementary treatise prepared for the use of midshipmen at the United States Naval Academy, deals chiefly with the details of types adopted by the navy, the only exception being the chapter on combined, or mixed, turbines. Several chapters are devoted to general principles, and there is information on condensing plants, heat losses and superheat, transmission, turbines for auxiliary machinery, lubrication, and instructions for the care and operation of Parsons and Curtis turbines, with an appendix giving the decision of the United States Court of Appeals in the infringement case of the Curtis companies against the William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Company. A notable feature is the large number of excellent detail sheets.

Russell, Walter M. Operation of gas works. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 1917. x, 209 p. illus. 8°. VOL

For the foreman, superintendent, engineer, or apprentice. The purpose is to give as simply and as clearly as possible, but with no sacrifice of completeness or accuracy, instructions for operating standard American types of apparatus in small or medium-sized plants, together with discussions of the principles involved. It is stated that the operations described have all been successfully tried out upon a commercial scale. The most recent developments, however, in mechanical operation, mass carbonization, and water gas operation have been omitted. Chapter 1 deals with organization and management; and chapter 6 with calorimetry and photometry.

Steinmetz, Charles Proteus. Theory and calculation of electric circuits... New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1917. xvi, 361 p. diagr. tables. 8°. VGM

Doctor Steinmetz is America's best known authority in the field of electrical mathematics. In revising his well known Alternating current phenomena for the fifth edition, the great increase in size made it necessary to divide the work into three parts, of which the present work is the second.

"In the following volume I have discussed the most important characteristics of the fundamental conception of electrical engineering, such as electric conduction, magnetism, wave shape, the meaning of reactance and similar terms, the problems of stability and instability of electric systems, etc., and have given a more extended application of the method of complex quantities, which the experience of these twenty years has shown to be the most powerful tool in dealing with alternating current phenomena." — Preface.

Stillman, Thomas Bliss. Engineering chemistry. Easton, Pa.: Chemical Publishing Co., 1916. v-viii, 760 p. 5. ed. 8°. VOE

Fifth edition of this well known guide to the testing and examination of engineering materials. Although the author died in August, 1915, at a time when a complete revision was well under way, the work was continued by his two sons in a thorough and satisfactory manner. For a statement of the many changes made see the Engineering news for February 15, 1917. A notable feature of the work is a number of late United States navy specifications.

Tilden, Sir William A. Chemical discovery and invention in the twentieth century... London: George Routledge & Sons, Ltd. [1916.] xvi, 487 p. 8°. VO

A companion volume to Edward Cressy's excellent work Discoveries and inventions of the 20th century. Occasional formulae and molecular diagrams should not dissuade the general reader — the book is intended for him. Part 1 tells a great deal about the wonderful facilities of modern laboratories. Part 2, entitled Modern discoveries and theories, deals in an interesting and simple way with chemical laws, electrons, radium, genesis and transmutations of the elements, solutions, electrolysis, catalysis, the architecture of molecules, the microscope and ultra-microscopic colloids. Part 3 explains practical applications, comprising chapters on hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, metals, luminosity of flames, petrol, coal tar, dyes, drugs, perfumes and essential oils, cellulose products, rubber, explosives, and the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. Part 4 has to do with a record of the progress in organic chemistry, with chapters on sugar, proteins, natural colours, and enzymes. A noteworthy book that should be in every public library.

Towers, Walter Kellogg. Masters of space: Morse and the telegraph; Thompson and the cable; Bell and the telephone; Marconi and the wireless telegraph; Carty and the wireless telephone. New York: Harper Bros., 1917. 7-300 p. illus. 8°.

This untechnical, simply written story "opens with the primitive methods of message sending by fire or smoke or other signals. The life and experiments of Morse are then pictured and the dramatic story of the invention and development of the telephone is set forth. The submarine cable followed with the struggles of Field, the business executive, and Thompson, the inventor and scientific expert... The early life of Alexander Graham Bell was full of color, and I have told the story of his patient investigations of human speech and hearing, which finally culminated in a practical telephone. There follows the fascinating story of Marconi and the wireless telegraph. Last comes the story of the wireless telephone... An inner view of the marvelous development of the telephone is added in the appendix." — From the preface.

It is presented merely as a summarization of the principal and fundamental facts that have been ascertained during the past decade and a half; it is not intended to be a critical discussion of these facts, or to be an argument in favor of or against any partisan conclusion or any remedial program."

The principal topics are: the labor force, racial composition of industrial workers; wages and earnings; loss in working time; conditions causing irregular employment; working conditions; the wage earner's family; living conditions; wage earner's health; the adequacy of wages and earnings.

"The subject matter of the book falls naturally into five distinct parts:

Part I begins with a brief exposition of the essential principles of all sound financing; it is devoted for the most part to a description of the different forms of financial organization of business enterprises, taking up in turn the individual proprietorship, the firm or partnership, and the corporation.

Part II discusses the various forms of security issues and the manner in which they may be combined and organized as determined by the basis of capitalization of the particular enterprise.

Part III treats of the methods of raising capital through the sale of securities and the usual forms of promotion and underwriting.

Part IV deals with efficient financial management; how capital funds are invested; how the amount required for working capital is ascertained; the proper management of capital and income through budgets; and some of the financial standards which should be kept in view.

Part V treats of financial mismanagement and irregularities, and of the processes of reorganization."

and effects, of a number of the more important economic changes and achievements in Europe during the past three hundred years. The vastness of the field has made necessary close calculation of proportions, and to the end that the volume might prove more than a sheer outline it has seemed desirable to adhere to three early decisions...first, to deal with the developments of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in only such aspects as seem essential to a reasonably clear comprehension of the transition from mediaeval to later modern economy...second, to omit altogether some phases of economic history which are of large consequence but of specially technical character, notably public finance; and, third, to restrict attention substantially to three leading countries, namely, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, France, and Germany."

LETTERS OF AMERICAN CLERGYMEN

IN January of this year, The New York Public Library received an interesting collection of letters by American clergymen, from 1711 to 1860, the donor being Simon Gratz, Esq., of Philadelphia. There are 172 letters, making about 304 pages. Some of them are addressed to Eleazar and John Wheelock, successively presidents of Dartmouth College, and to Rev. Dr. Stephen Williams, of Longmeadow, near Springfield, Mass. The subject-matter is generally ecclesiastical in character, but by no means exclusively so. Important public matters or early American education are discussed generously by several of the writers. The following five letters have been selected for printing as representative of the collection.

JOSEPH GREEN TO STEPHEN WILLIAMS

Boston October y^e 20th 1722

Rev^d S^r

Tho' I am almost afraid I shall glutt you wth Epistles, and by reiterated writing, render my lines distastefull unto you if I hold this trade by all opportunities; Yett wⁿ very Convenient opportunities (as this is) do present, I shall not be wholly silent, tho' I am sensible of the unpolishedness of my lines, untill my silence be comanded or intimated by your Pen or otherways; as my writing so frequently doth verifie; what I can relate unto you in this Epistle that I can presume would be gratefull unto you shall be comprized in a few words; we hear in the last Ships from England that the Bishop of Rochester is in the Tower for some treasonable fact, who (as we likewise hear) has deserved such treatment long before now: The Nation (as they relate) is in a great confusion upon w^t particular head I cant say;

Coll. Taylor M^r Secretary & Coll. Stoddard are gone down to y^e Eastward with the Mohawks, (one of whom that was left here under great Indispositions of body (by the bloody flux) on y^e 17 Instant departed this life & on yesterday Evening was honourably interred with a sword upon his Coffin, carried by Porters, and six Captains of our militia for his paul holders, was followed by the Council and all the officers of the militia beside other Gentlemen of the Town, the number of the spectators were innumerable &c. The intent of their going thither is to enquire the reasons of the last rebellious rupture, & to endeavour y^e Establishment of a well-grounded Peace (if it might be effected) between us & the Indians, the mohawks becoming Sponsors for the Indians, what the event of it will be we must leave.

Whilest M^r Elliott was with us here M^r Checkley, D^r Gibbins & Greaves used many Stratagems for the obtaining his Conversation, which M^r Elliott as resolutely declined. M^r Harris's conduct in this affair is admirable, he shews no willingness to receive them into the Church; I hear he has suspended Jack Torey as a nonjurour from their Communion. M^r Cutler is daily expected here to sail in Lethered to whom the oath of allegiance &c will be offered (as we suppose) before he goes, which if he refuses, we may suppose he will not meet wth very good acceptance in England, (if he takes it, it may obviate many reflections that may otherwise be cast upon him

M^r Cook is like to settle att Sudbury, & M^r Dexter has a Call to Mystick, but of these things Gerald must inform you; Gerald is in all imaginable hurry so that I cant pform what I att first proposed, butt am forced to break of abruptly, wth presenting my humble service to M^{rs} Williams, Duty to M^r Brewer &c and all that enquire after me, intreating Seriously your Prayers for a barren sinner under the Cultivation of Gods vineyard, who yet desire to have my dependence upon him on all occations.

I am Rev^d S^r your most humble & obliged Serv^t

CALEB SMITH TO JACOB GREEN

Very Dear & Rev^d Sir

I should have been exceeding glad to have seen you here this week, for as to my self have been so disordered with a violent Cold I tooke the Day I left Princeton, that have been obliged for the most Part to keep my Roome since my Return Home. It is seated on the right Side of my Head, and attended with a violent Pain in my Ear, I pray that God would help me to improve under his chastning Rod; alas I have Reason to be abased in the Dust that I have got no more Benefit by past Tribulations. O my Leanness! my Leanness! when will the time come that my wretched Heart will mend, without divine Grace every Dispensation will be vain.

I desire to join with you in Thankfulness for dear M^{rs} Green's safe Deliverance, may your infant Daughter live & be a Comfort to you both. I hope your Spouse is by this Time recovered, may you long be happy in each other.

By the letters which M^r Smith brought from Virginia, we learn'd that the main Reason of M^r Davies non-Acceptance of the Presidentship, was that the Presb^y there did not chuse to be instrumental in removing him from that Part of the Country, where they so greatly needed his Assistance; The main Difficulty did not lie with M^r Davies or his People; we therefore concluded to make a farther Tryal, & have put down M^r Halsey to solicit M^r Davies coming to the College as vice-President untill the Spring when we might have an Opportunity of trying the matter before the Synod; and we concluded to send M^r Worter there to supply his Pulpit in the mean Time. We have a good Deal of Reason to think this Scheme will succeed, especially from some Conversation which M^r Smith our Messenger had with M^r Davies on the Head. We appointed a Trustee-meeting the fourth Wednesday in November next, and concluded that M^r Treat should desire his son to come to the College at the End of the vacancy & assist in the Instruction untill the Trustee-Meeting, when it is supposed he will be chose Tutor, I am doubtful how he will fill the Place, but know of nothing better at present, as M^r Duffield declines coming.

M^{rs} Edwards & her Son are gone to Philadelphia, & I hear the Doct^r has concluded to let her have the Children, but the Son, I mean President Burr's, was very sick at the Time of Commencement, & 'Twas much feared whether he would recover.

I had Thought of setting out on a Journey to New-England next week, tho' it is doubtful whether I shall be well enough to go abroad, must leave the Matter with Providence, it is good for us to be disappointed sometimes, I wish for an Heart to improve all the Dealings of Heaven toward me, & to be able to hold myself wholly at the divine Disposal.

Kindest Salutations to good M^r Green, with tender Love to your Children from Dear Sir

Your ever Affectionate
Caleb Smith

P.S. At Present it seems most probable I shall prosecute the Scheme of a northern Expedition. If it were possible should be extremely glad if you would supply my People a Sabbath in my Absence & I shall be willing to return the Favour.

DAVID PARSONS TO ELEAZAR WHEELOCK

Rev^d & Hon^d Sr, & my very Dear Friend

These Present you my Kindest & most Sincere Compliments, Wishing & praying you strength & Grace, & Every needful Qualification, Requisite to maintain the Dignity & Character of the place, & Discharge with fidelity & success the Arduous and Important Trusts, devolved upon you: I Rejoyce greatly, often to hear of the prosperous state of y^r College; & my future Expectations from it (I Confess) are not small; It appears to me of god, & will outlive all the malicious Attempts of its opposers; & will flourish & be famous, when its Avow^d Enemies are Dead & Rotten.

I am allow^d but a minute by Esq^r Chauncy to tell you he has upon my Advice sent his son to be Disciplind at y^r school; in preparation for Admission into y^r College: The youth is Airy, & needs to be brought under the Yoke; & Confined to Close study; I Hope under your Wise Direction & Tuition he may become a Worthy man & a Credit to the Name of his Progenitors. He is too prone to Company & a Waste of Time; & a superficial method of study; I Thot it but Honest to mention this for his sake as you will herby, seeing his Weak side; be under Advantages to know, where to Employ your special Attention. His father Desires you would use all needed freedoms with him; & put him under any Restraints, or Constraints you shall Judge necessary.

M^r Boltwood is now waiting & can allow me Time no more than to Tell you; I dont know how to Express by words, My Dear affections & good

Wishes to you & yours to whom I send Hearty Respects as to y^r self; Especially to Dear M^r Woodward, who is very Tenderly Beloved by his & Hon^d Rev^d & Dear S^r

FROM CHARLES NISBIT TO ————— ?

[The following letter is incomplete and the date is lacking, but from internal evidence it appears to have been written during the late summer of 1792. — Editor.]

The hasty Manner in which yours is written has led me to attribute the Discovery of another Person to Mr. Wakefield, but it is no great Matter, as both the Discoveries are of equal Authority & Utility. Men that think public Prayer a Sin, will have no Need of the Sabbath, and those who deny the Sabbath, will have no Opportunity of Public Prayer. But I observe that you say this Mr. Wakefield is a Translator of the New Testament, & that the Reviewers have given a favourable Account of his Translation, from which I infer that it must be favourable to Socinianism. It if were not a laborious Task to translate the Scriptures, we should have many different Translations of them. The Germans are not afraid of Labour, & therefore they have many Translations, both of the Old & New Testament. The Story I mentioned with Regard to Dr. Beattie was not intended as an Instance of American Ignorance, as you seem to imagine, but of Obstinacy & Negligence, as the Person I referred to had an Opportunity of being fully informed of the Matter in Question. Your Doubt with Regard to Dr. Beattie is easily resolved. By the Law of Scotland every Professor must be of the Communion of the Established Church, & sign the Confession of Faith & Formula of Church Government. Ergo Dr. Beattie as well as others. Nor is there any Inconsistency betwixt this & Mr. M^cDonald's Story. At Aberdeen it is common for Students to pass their Course of Philosophy, & even to study Divinity, before they determine whether they are to be of the Presbyterian or of the Episcopal Church, & many adhere to the one or the other, according as they first can get a Settlement in either. So that it is very possible that Mr. Beattie might imagine that Mr. McDonald has not such Friends, as could get him a Place in the Established Church, which was afterwards found on Trial to be true, it was therefore his Interest to seek a Settlement in an Episcopal Meeting, for which the Doctor's Recommendation might be of Service to him. Nor do I in the least doubt that he would endeavour to remove his Scruples on that Head, as he has lived long in the Habits of the greatest Intimacy with Dr. Porteous Bishop of London, & Professes in his Essay on Truth his Indifference with Regard to the Presbyterian & Episcopal Communions. Yet I know very well that he refused to take Episcopal Orders, tho' he was offered a very rich Living in England, with the Hopes of further Preferment, on that Condition. You ought to know much more of the Blunders of Printers among us, than I can do, as I do not see ten of their Papers in a Year. What I mentioned in my last was a senseless Publication of Mr. Bailey's with Regard to Scotland, in which many palpable Falsehoods were strongly asserted. And I am glad that I am enabled by a Letter from a worthy Minister in Scotland, which I received along with yours, to assure you that tho' Mr. Bailey asserted that the established Clergy had mostly embraced Socinianism or Deism, & that all Creeds & confessions were abolished, my Correspondent, who is a pious & intelligent Minister, writes me that a worldly & graceless Spirit prevails among some of their Clergy, much more than Socinianism, or Heterodoxy of any kind. He says that the Unitarians have had very little Success in disseminating their Principles in Scotland, & that even among the Dissenters in England, where they had much more Success, their Interest is now declining, & that many of their largest Congregations are now endeavouring to get serious & orthodox Ministers, in stead of their Socinian Teachers. He says that many more orthodox, pious and able young Men have obtained Settlements in the Established Church during a few Years past, than for many Years formerly, & he mentions six Counties, in which Arminianism had prevailed much hitherto, but was now almost banished by the Labours of pious & orthodox Ministers, lately admitted, & that much good has been done in the Highlands, by the Labours, of the Missionaries & School-masters of the Society for propagating Christian knowledge, who have a fund of Ninety thousand Pounds Sterling, which they apply for the Support of Religion in the Highlands & Islands. And altho' he owns that Infidelity, Vice and Profaneness have made no small Progress in that Country since I left it, yet when they compare themselves with other Countries, they have Reason to be thankful, & to admire the Patience & Mercy of God towards them. You may depend on this more than all the Scribblers of your News-papers, who pretend to give you an Account of Matters, whereof they themselves know nothing. I am not surprised to learn that Lies are printed in England, as well as in America. The Spirit of the French Revolution which is spread among a Party in that Country, has much infected their Publications, & America is held up by that Party as perfect in every Respect. But some who have been in America, & who ought to know better, have been as guilty in this Respect as those who use Conjectures, or talk at Random, to promote the Interests of their Party. Thomas Payne & Joel Barlow have spread many lies in England, with Respect to this Country. Barlow says expressly that no Nation in the world is so devout as the Americans. Now if he only meant by this that those in America who were religious People, were as devout as others elsewhere, it would be impossible to contradict him, but if he means as certainly he does, that the Profession & Appearance of Religion is as common in America, as in other Countries, he lies in the grossest Manner. I have never heard of any Printers in this Country who had exercised the same Trade in Great Britain, except Mr. Rivington of New York, who was the Publisher of the Royal Gazette in the time of the late War, & at the same time a Spy of General Washington's, the largeness of his Parts & Conscience enabling him to act in this double Capacity. Tom Paine will be perfectly in his Element in the French Convention, and if he endeavours to realise his favourite Scheme of a standing Mob, as the Organ by which the People ought to act at all times, in that Country, its Misery will be compleat. Indeed it is almost so already. How thankful ought we to be, that we are so far from it! Our Mobbers can only join with their Brethren in their Wishes, & by rejoicing in the Ravage made by these Wolves of Europe, give a needless Proof of the Baseness of their own Characters. It is probable that poor Lewis the 16th will have a Mock Trial & a real Execution in a short time. None will dare to appear as his Counsel except perhaps some Wretch appointed by the Convention for form's sake, like the Person who is called the Devil's Advocate at Rome, who pleads against the Canonisation of Saints. The present Demagogues, having so lately experienced how much may be done by a Mob, will not think themselves secure in their Seats, till they have got rid of the King & Queen, lest a Mob should be raised in their favours, which might sacrifice their present Leaders in a summary Manner. No Weather-cock is more variable than a Mob. It is only a few Years, that on the Birth of the late Dauphin, every Individual in Paris sat up all Night, in order to get the earliest Advices of the Queen's Delivery & the Addresses of all Ranks & Orders of Men to the King on that Occasion, vied with each other in expressing the warmest Affection to his Person, & the utmost Satisfaction with his Government. Now again, when the Gaols are pulled down, & their former Inhabitants fill the Seats of Legislature, nothing less than his Blood can satisfy them, tho' his only Crime is that of being a King, which is now considered as the greatest of all. But poor Lewis was no less popular in America. He was called our great & good Ally, the Friend of Liberty & Mankind, & his Wisdom, his Justice & Magnanimity were extolled to the utmost, & now when he is a Prisoner, he is insulted in his Misfortunes by ungrateful Wretches, who without him had been nothing. I am inclined to think that Tom Payne will endeavour to be King of the Mob of Paris, & to supplant Pethion the King of the Day, unless the Jacobin Club have another Candidate already in View. If their People can be kept from rising for a little time, it is probable that the Game of Paper Money will be tried anew, as great Fortunes must have been made by the Assignats, which are now at an End, by the Death of the National Assembly. The Concern that the French Leaders are taking in the Affairs of Flanders & Savoy, tho' wisely meant to keep their Army at a Distance, & to turn off the attention of the People from their own Misery at home, will probably tend to upset them in the End, as when an Army is kept long on foot, factions may arise in it, which may turn the Soldiers against their Masters. Cromwell himself was almost upset by the Sect of Levellers, that arose in his Army, & you know that Charles the fifth kept his Troops so long assembled before Magdeburgh, that they turned against him, & obliged him to fly to Italy. I agree with you that there appears to be something singular in many of the Occurrences of our Times, but as human Nature is always the same from the beginning of the World, the History of the Times may furnish us with the Causes of these Singularities. The Progress of Infidelity & Atheism in France is more than sufficient to account for all the Wonders that have happened there. Consider a Country without Religion, Law or Order, a furious Mob pillaging & murdering without the least fear of the Gallows. Men without Faith, Conscience or moral Principle of any kind, intoxicated with imaginary Rights & Privileges, intent on Gain & the favour of the Mob, & these will abundantly account, both for the Confusions & Murders in France, & the Approbation that has been given to these Doings by Persons of the same Characters in America. All Men by Nature are just what the Scriptures described them. "When thou sawest a Thief, then thou consentedst with him, & thou hast been Partaker with Adulterers." Psal. 50. 18. Who knowing "the Judgment of God (that they which commit such things are worthy of Death) not only do the same, but have Pleasure in them that do them." Rom. 1. 32. The Scripture is the best Key to the Events of Providence, as these are only the fulfilling of the Scripture. Some well disposed People conceived hopes from the Beginning of the Revolution of France, because they thought it would tend to lessen the Interests of Popery, & even Charles Fox, who is not the most pious Man in England, praised it at first. But since he has been in France & seen things with his own Eyes, neither he nor any of the Minority of the British Parliament have undertaken its Defence. And even Dr. Priestly feared to trust his precious Life to the Government of the People, lest he should have the Fate of poor La Fayette. He was the man who made the King a Prisoner, & he is now a Prisoner himself. And his Sentence in Germany will not be milder than that of Lewis at Paris, as both will be tried by their Enemies. I suppose that Thomas Payne must undergo some Purgation or Penance for having dedicated his Pamphlet to the Marquis de la Fayette, but if the Convention appoint him a mild Confessor, he may be only appointed to walk thrice bare footed round the Shrine of Voltaire & Rousseau, & after burning his Dedication with his own hand, & asking Pardon of the People in the Place de Greve, with a Rope about his Neck, he may obtain Absolution. The Defenders of the late Constitution of France will now be busy in refuting their own Writings, & proving that no Constitution, ought to last longer than from one Mob to another. They will also probably annex a small Dissertation against the Obligation of Oaths, but as this has never been mentioned in France, they will not need to say much upon it. Mankind are now pretty generally convinced that Oaths are but Words, & Words but Wind, as Butler observed long ago. You Air Balloons will probably divide the Attention of the People, & leave them less Leisure to attend to the Play-house & the Congress. They will likewise give your Citizens an Opportunity of spending their superfluous Cash, which is no small Conveniency. — But having detained you long enough in animadverting on yours, I remain with Esteem.

Rev^d. Dear Sir,

Your very humble Servant,

Cha^s. Nisbet.

FROM JOHN SERGEANT TO ENOCH HALE

New Stockbridge Nov: 20th 1806

Rev: Sir

I received your letter directing me to perform the ceremony of entering into a covenant of friendship with the Stockbridge Indians in season to perform the Service, the following is a Copy of my address to them and their Answer, which I hope will meet the approbation of the Society, After mentioning my appointment then said

"Children and Brothers attend

In the name of the Society I now stretch fourth my hand to take hold of your hand to establish a covenant of friendship which you once proposed to the Hampshire Missionary Society, that they may join hand in hand with you in the great and important things respecting the good and happiness of your Western Brethren for whom you have manifested a great concern.

The Society are desirous to send some good men to teach the Indians the knowledge of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ, if your Friends of the different Tribes should be desirous of it.

Children and Brothers

Be assured that their friendship will extend to all the different Tribes of Indians, the Society wish they should be Informed that their friendship is not for the sake of their land or anything they have.

The ears of the Society will allways be open to hear your voice.

And further the Society now open a common path which leads from your fire place to theirs, and remove all the brush, and every stumbling block out of the path that you may always see it clearly.

They wish your friends a prosperous journey in their proposed visit to your Western Brethren, and the good Lord would preserve them from all danger, and in due time return them in peace and safety."

farewell

A String of Wampom delivered.

The Answer.

Father you inform us that you are appointed by the Hampshire Missionary Society to enter into a Covenant of friendship with us for the purpose of opening the door to the distant Western Tribes of Indians by which means the light of the glorious gospel of our Saviour might be admitted among them.

Father This information gladden our hearts and for which we now thank you.

To the Hampshire Missionary Society
Fathers and Brothers attend.

Our nation often remember the ancient covenant of friendship that was established between our Ancestors and yours. We greatly rejoiced when we heard that the great and good Spirit moved the hearts of many people in the east that they have compassionate feelings towards the different Tribes of our colour who inhabit the western Country.

Fathers and Brothers.

We are glad that you stretch fourth your hand to establish a covenant of friendship between you and our nation, that by the help of the great and good spirit we may be enabled to join hand in hand in promoting the happiness of our western Breath[r]en who are perishing in heathen darkness, by which means the light of the glorious gospel of our Saviour might spread among them.
Fathers and Brothers

We now join with you in opening a common path which leads from your fire place to our fire place, and remove every stone and rotten log from it, and pull up every brier which grows on it, that we may walk backwards and forwards to visit one another without hurting our feet, and this path leads thro: the different fire places of all the different Tribes inhabiting the western Country May the good Spirit bless you and us, that this covenant may last to the latest generations four Strings of Wampom delivered.

Done in Council this

19th day of Nov: 1806

The Deligation from the Tribe have for some time been detained for want of money to purchase necessary articles for their journey, they are now ready and waiting only for favourable weather when they will set out. A young man of this Tribe goes in the company to be employed as a School Master by the Society in Boston. As it may gratify your Society I will transcribe a Coppy of the agreement I made with him by the direction of said Society.

The following is a Coppy of an agreement made with John Jacob:

1st For your services in teaching the school the Society will agree to allow you $18 pr Month, your wages to begin on the day you set out and end on the day you return.

2^{ly} In consideration of the great distance you are to go and the difficulty of transmitting you money I agree to advance you $60 and as soon as you are settled in your school you are to inform me by letter, I will forward your wages by Mail or otherwise lay it out for the support of your Children as you shall direct and as fast as it becomes due.

3^{ly} It is desired that you continue in said school one year at lest and on your return the Society agree to allow a full compensation for your services, on condition of your observing the following instructions (viz) you are to proceed to the western Country with your companions a Diligation from the Tribe.

That as soon as you are introduced by your friends to a perticular Tribe as is thought most proper, you are to begin your school and endeavour to be regular as the stated hours.

You are to teach the Children to read and write, and as soon as you find it best you are to teach them to sing. You are to learn them some Psalms in your language if you find they can understand it. On the Sabaths you are to refrain from all worldly business and recreation.

You are to note down in a journal every thing important that takes place, particularly at the end of every week, how many Children you have had, and what progress they make, and send me coppies from your Journals once in two months by Mail or otherwise as you shall find oppertunity. Our Chief will inform the Indians they must give you your board, and what ever they do in this way you are to give credit to the Society towards your wages.

You with our Chiefs who will be with you will use your utmost endeavours, that you be supplied with books paper &c but if you are obliged to advance your own money for these necessary things you shall be refunded the same.

When you send forward your Journals you are to try to [obtain] some Missionary or Agent for Indian affairs to certify [what?] representations are just.

You will please to inform the Society there is a steady sober man of the Deleware Tribe who is expected to go in the company. he is not at home, but shall see him in a few days, and think of proposing to him to teach a school, to be under the direction of your society. that when they arrive among the Indians, and there appears to be proper incouragement, he should immediately write to me, when I can inform you the state of the business, in this way the $50 might be well appropriated, if this plan should meet with their approbation. as I borrowed the wampom of the Indians for the above mentioned purpose paid them the $4. If you find no better way you can direct M^r Dutton one of your Missionaries in this vicinity to pay it to me, who informed me he had money on hand for your Society, remain your most obliged friend and brother in the Gospel of Christ

John Sergeant

Rev: M^r Hale.

N B It is not probable that any thing will turn up untill spring respecting a second proposed school among the western Indians wish your Society would so direct their matters that the $50 may be at command when ever there shall be an opening. as soon as I hear will write.

Slightly imperfect.

The first book printed in English in North America. The version of the Psalms was made about the year 1636, the principal divines of the country each translating a portion. The principal part of the work was committed to Mr. Richard Mather, minister of the church in Dorchester, who probably wrote the preface also, and to Mr. Thomas Weld and Mr. John Eliot, associate ministers of the church in Roxbury. The work of printing was completed in 1640, and the new Psalm book was adopted at once by nearly every congregation in the colony of Massachusetts Bay, and for that reason it came to be known as the Bay Psalm book. Of this famous book there are only ten copies known to be extant, of which only four are perfect.

For detailed statement and description see the facsimile reprint with the introduction by Wilberforce Eames.

Contains poems by Theodore Dwight, Richard Alsop, Mason F. Cogswell, and L. Hopkins.

"The first number of 'The Echo' appeared in 'The American Mercury,' at Hartford, in August, 1791. It was written at Middletown, by Richard Alsop and Theodore Dwight. The authors, at the time of writing it, had no expectation of its being published. Their sole object was to amuse themselves and a few of their personal friends. The general account of its origin and design is given in the preface to the volume, in which the numbers were afterward collected and published in New York. With the exception of a few lines written by Drs. Mason F. Cogswell and Elihu H. Smith, and a part of one or two numbers by Dr. Lemuel Hopkins, the entire work was the production of Messrs. Alsop and Dwight. Judge Trumbull never wrote a line in it." — C. W. Everest, Poets of Connecticut.

Extracts from the first and second cantos of this poem are reprinted in The Echo, New York, 1807, p. 195-207, with the following notice prefixed:

"The following extracts are from a poem entitled Democracy, the first canto of which was printed in New-York, in March, 1794, and at the time excited no inconsiderable share of the public attention. This poem was written in consequence of a tumultuous meeting of the citizens of that place, instigated by a few popular demagogues, for the purpose of prescribing to Congress the adoption of hostile measures against Great Britain. The second canto, which was of much greater length, was prepared for the press immediately after the appearance of the first, but the timidity of the booksellers, and the peculiar circumstances of the times prevented its publication."

"A free parody of the Lay of the last minstrel ... The production is principally devoted to satirizing the predatory warfare of the British on Chesapeake Bay, and, what is somewhat remarkable, was published in a very handsome style in London with a preface highly complimentary to the author. The hero is Admiral Cockburn, and the principal incident the burning and sacking of the little town of Havre de Grace on the coast of Maryland. It had at that time what might be called the distinction of provoking a fierce review from the London Quarterly. It is clever as a parody, and contains many passages entirely original and of no inconsiderable beauty." — Duyckinck, Cyclopedia of American literature, New-York, 1866, v. 2, p. 10.

"The only known copy of this poem in America, so far as the writer has been able to ascertain, is in the Boston Public Library, where it was acquired a few years ago. The British Museum has also a copy. The author is unknown. It is quite inferior to the verses of Mather Byles on the same occasion, and its publication lacks the Governor's sanction, which was given to the former. Both poems are printed in similar type, and probably were from the same press. The rarity of this publication has induced the present reprint, which is approximately in fac-simile of the original. Paterson, N. J., July 1, 1897. William Nelson."

GEORGE LOCKHART RIVES

THE HON. GEORGE LOCKHART RIVES, President of The New York Public Library, died at his summer home in Newport, August 18, 1917.

Mr. Rives was elected a trustee of the Astor Library in 1883. He filled this office until he offered his resignation in 1888, in order to move to Washington as Assistant Secretary of State. In 1893 he was elected a trustee of the Lenox Library, and, as such, became a member of the new Board of Trustees of The New York Public Library. He was Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Library from its organization in May, 1895, until his resignation in 1902, when he was appointed Corporation Counsel of the City of New York. He continued his membership of the Board, however, and became successively Second Vice-President and First Vice-President. Following the death of Mr. Cadwalader, he was elected President on May 13, 1914.

It is difficult to describe adequately the importance of Mr. Rives' services in the creation and development of the Public Library. The working out of the scheme for the consolidation of the three constituent corporations was a complicated task. So also was the adjustment of the various relations between the Library and the City, both with reference to the construction and operation of the central building and the establishment and maintenance of the many circulation branches. When these had been arranged, the development of the institution in such a way as to meet the growing needs of the public required and still requires most careful attention. In all of this Mr. Rives gave his best and constant effort, and the results that have been accomplished bear the unfading mark of his able and devoted participation.

Mr. Rives was an honorary Doctor of Laws of both Amherst and Princeton, a Governor and former President of the New York Hospital and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters. His most important published work was his two-volume history, "United States and Mexico, 1821 to 1848."

The New York Sun, on August 22, 1917, published in its editorial columns an estimate of Mr. Rives' services, which was in part as follows:

In Newport this morning the burial service will be read over the body of a citizen whom New York can ill afford to lose.

George Lockhart Rives, lawyer, scholar, athlete, author, Assistant Secretary of State of the United States and Corporation Counsel of the city of New York, was an embodiment of the highest type of American gentleman.

Born of distinguished lineage, in 1849, he had not reached the Scriptural term of old age; and a youth which had been vigorous enough to make him a victorious oarsman at Henley when he was at Cambridge University in England, after having graduated at Columbia in the class of 1868, promised a much longer life than has been allotted to him.

In college he stood high as a student. Greek, Latin and mathematics, well taught, sufficed to take a young man through Columbia in his day; but he browsed in wider fields of learning and his classmates confidentially predicted for him a distinguished career in public life, unless indeed his aristocratic tastes should make the game appear hardly to be worth the candle...

A Democrat by inheritance and choice, he early advocated the political doctrines which have come to be indissolubly associated with the names of Tilden and Cleveland; and under the Administration of President Cleveland he became an Assistant Secretary of State, being particularly attracted to the office because the State Department has always to deal with matters of the broadest scope and highest interest. He became a partner in a prosperous law firm soon after his admission to the bar; and under Mayor Low he held the office of Corporation Counsel and administered the affairs of the Law Department of the city with marked ability and success. There is no more honorable position in the legal profession in this country than that of chief law officer of the city of New York. He knew this and discharged its duties accordingly.

In the quieter domain of education and books he was also always at work. For years he was the master mind in the board of trustees of Columbia University, and the same may be said of his relation to the government of the great Public Library in this city. He was an accurate and accomplished scholar without being a prig or pedant; and by reason of his broad and generous sympathies he was intent upon making the library and its branches render the utmost possible service to all sorts and conditions of men, women and children in the community.

George Rives was not a man who demanded recognition from the public; he was too modest for that. It is because he deserved more than he received that we pay this tribute to his worth and memory.

MUSIC PUBLISHERS IN NEW YORK CITY BEFORE 1850

A DIRECTORY COMPILED BY MABEL ALMY HOWE

THIS list is offered as an aid in approximating the dates of musical compositions published in New York City in the first half of the nineteenth century. In most cases the publishers neglected to print the dates on the publication itself, and as comparatively few works were copyrighted, there is no clue to the date beyond the name and address of the publisher, or an occasional engraver's name.

Important and longer-lived firms underwent frequent changes of firm name and address. A detailed chronological table of such changes will often make it possible to place the date of publication within a period of five years.

The following data were secured through a systematic search of the New York City directories. Names which did not appear in the directory until after 1850 have been excluded. However, those appearing before 1850 have been traced to their final disappearance. The New York directories before 1800 (they run back to 1786) have been included in the search, but for bibliographical and historical purposes Mr. O. G. Sonneck's "Bibliography of early secular American music" (Washington, 1905), particularly the index, contains fuller information and will be of much greater service than this mere list of names and addresses. Mr. Sonneck's bibliography, however, does not go far beyond 1800.

Directory entries do not constitute an exhaustive history of a firm, and are at times probably not even reliable. I have found copyright dates earlier than the first occurrence of a name in the directory. In almost all cases where two addresses follow a name in the directory, only the business address has been given. If only one address was given in the directory that has been copied exactly, with or without the designation "house."

Several engravers of music and those keeping music stores have been included, but no attempt has been made to list the numerous unimportant names which appear in the directories for only two or three years as connected with music.

Thanks are due Dr. Otto Kinkeldey, Chief of the Music Division of

The New York Public Library, at whose suggestion and with whose aid this table was compiled.

Forain, Aquafortiste; Catalogue Raisonné de l'Oeuvre Gravé de l'Artiste, avec une Eau-Forte Original," by Marcel Guérin, Paris, 1912; and a copy (number 31 of 100 printed) of "J.-L. Forain, Lithographe; Catalogue Raisonné de l'Oeuvre Lithographié de l'Artiste," by Marcel Guérin, Paris, 1910.

From Les Amis de L'Alsace-Lorraine, New York, came 17 volumes and 19 pamphlets relating to Alsace-Lorraine; from Mrs. Charles S. Fairchild of New York, typewritten copies of 12 letters written by John Lincklaen to Samuel S. Forman; from Mr. John Muir of New York, 50 copies of his work, "The birth of American thrift," from Sr. Luis A. Mohr of Buenos Aires, Argentina, copies of four of his works, including "Grabados en Mármol"; from Mr. Norman P. Heffley of Brooklyn, copies of three of his works, relating to the history of shorthand; from Mrs. L. Haffkin-Hamburger of Moscow, Russia, 12 copies of her illustrated pamphlet in the Russian language describing the New York Public Library and its work; and from Mrs. William Allen Butler of Yonkers, N. Y., 13 bound volumes and 2 single numbers of "Notes and Queries."

Mrs. Hubert Evans of New York presented the Library with a collection of book-plates, 17 in number; and Mr. George H. Sullivan of New York gave a collection of prints, 379 in all, including 4 etchings by J. P. Hackert, old prints by Georg Philipp Rugendas and others, and 57 Pinelli prints.

Miscellaneous collections of books were received from Miss Helen Weston of West New Brighton, Staten Island (57 volumes and 2 maps); from Mrs. Nelson Smith of New York (162 volumes and 79 pamphlets); from Miss Helen Porter of New York (90 volumes, 38 pamphlets, and 73 periodicals); and from Mr. Joseph Byrne Lockey of New York (31 volumes and 16 pamphlets, mainly Spanish).

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN AUGUST, 1917

DURING the month of August, 1917, there were received at the Library 2,291 volumes and 4,334 pamphlets. (These figures include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 53,082. They consulted 146,576 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 149,340.

EXHIBITION OF ETCHINGS BY REMBRANDT
FROM THE J. PIERPONT MORGAN COLLECTION

BY FRANK WEITENKAMPF, L.H.D.
Chief of the Art and Prints Division

THE Prints Division of The New York Public Library has arranged an exhibition of about 170 etchings by Rembrandt, selected from the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection.

Recurring exhibitions of Rembrandt's etched work are as interesting, as desirable, and as inevitable as are the performances of the plays of Shakespeare or the symphonies of Beethoven. The present exhibition consists of a selection of the artist's best plates, in impressions usually impeccable, and often in states of great rarity. It offers the delight of renewed acquaintance to the practised connoisseur and the opportunity of study for those less experienced. Rembrandt's range and power as an etcher are illustrated in a remarkably adequate manner, as the selections have been chosen with the aim of making the exhibition representative.

The chronological arrangement of an artist's work serves best for the study of his progressive development, especially when his productions are as numerous, as diverse in subject-matter, as varying in changing manner of expression as are these etchings by Rembrandt. Classification by subject (i. e., portraits, landscapes, religious, genre) as indicated by Bartsch, has generally, but not always, been followed in Rembrandt exhibitions. On the initiative of Sir Seymour Haden, the Burlington Fine Arts Club's exhibition of 1877 was arranged chronologically, as were those of the Boston Museum (1887) and the British Museum (1899). For the permanent collection of Rembrandt's etchings in the British Museum a similar course was followed, and A. M. Hind's catalogue of that collection has been employed in the arrangement of the present exhibition. The visitor will thus be able to follow the unfolding of Rembrandt's art throughout the three periods (1628-39, 1640-49, 1650-61) into which Haden divided it according to style and method. Later, the exhibition will be rearranged and classified by subjects. This unusual plan will give an opportunity to study the prints both by chronological arrangement and according to subject matter.

In a number of instances the same plate appears in several states, showing additions and changes made by the artist. This is a matter of obvious interest to the student, who is further served by the penciled notes on the mats of the prints, giving title, date, state, and names of former owners. The list of owners reads like a roll-call of well-known collectors, with such names as Irwin, Buccleugh, Aylesford, Vanderbilt, and many others of note. In addition, numerous labels with citations from various authorities accompany the prints in the present exhibition. Such information has in the past been found to be interesting and helpful to visitors in the Library's print gallery.

The attraction of Rembrandt, the supreme master in his sphere, is a thing apart from, and above, considerations of technique merely, or of elegance or grace of treatment, or grandeur or beauty of subject. It is a matter pre-eminently of personality. As W. H. Downes says, common, every-day people and episodes are presented with a "whole-souled understanding and sympathy" which "leave an ineffaceable impression of the grandeur of the humblest and most ordinary of subjects when they are seen through a great temperament." Beyond Rembrandt's keenness of observation, wonderful draughtsmanship, masterly control of the medium he employed (ranging from the most summary indication, as in "Six's Bridge," to a mezzotint-like completeness of effect, as in the portrait of Jan Six) is the intangible element of his humanness, something not to be analyzed, "the spirit," as Binyon has it, "of one of the fullest, deepest natures that ever breathed."

The exhibition, obviously of the greatest importance, will be on view until the end of March. A list of the prints follows.

ETCHINGS BY REMBRANDT SELECTED FROM THE COLLECTION OF J. PIERPONT MORGAN ON EXHIBITION IN THE PRINT GALLERY, ROOM 321

The prints are arranged according to the numbering in Bartsch's catalogue of Rembrandt's etchings, with states according to Rovinski. The figure in parentheses, following the number in each case, represents the numbering in A. M. Hind's Rembrandt's etchings (1912), in which latter book the items are listed in chronological order, and which has also been followed in the assigning of dates in the present list.

DEHYDRATED FOODS

A LIST OF REFERENCES TO MATERIAL IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY MISS FERRIE JONES
Technology Division

1885

1. Lattimore, S. A. Report on examination of dried apples. (New York State.—Board of Health, 6th annual report, Albany, 1885, p. 379-385.) SPB

A general discussion of the possible injurious effects to the consumer of the use of sulphur and zinc in drying apples.

1888

2. Pidgeon, Daniel. Fruit evaporation in America. illus. (Royal Agricultural Society of England, Journal, London, v. 24, 1888, p. 486-492.) VPA

An English account of the American industry in its early days. The author has taken his observations and statistics from Rochester, New York.

3. Balmer, J. A. Prunes. illus. (Washington Agricultural Experiment Station, Bulletin 38, Pullman, 1889, p. 1-44.) VPG

Has described a number of evaporators, but diligent inquiry has failed to discover an operator who is using one of them at the present time.

4. Cornwall, H. B. Dried apples. (New Jersey.—Dairy Commissioner, Report, Trenton, 1889, p. 45-46; 1890, p. 59-60.) VPQ

Results of tests for zinc in samples of dried apples. References to objections by German chemists to the American exported product.

1890

5. Hilgard, E. W. The sulphuring of fruits. (California.—Agricultural Experiment Station, Report, Berkeley, 1890, p. 131-133.) VPG

Methods and effects briefly discussed.
Reprinted in Bulletin 86 of the above named station.

1892

6. Doty, Joseph W. Fruit-evaporator. (United States Patents, 1892, no. 477,856.) Patents Room

Steam evaporator.

7. Gilham, William C. Fruit-evaporator. (United States Patents, 1892, no. 484,910.) Patents Room

Comprised of a steam-generator, a pan for water, diverging steam-pipes leading from the generator to the pan and others from the pan to the generator.

8. Taylor, Horace H. Tray for drying fruit. (United States Patents, 1892, no. 486,137.) Patents Room

Improvements in evaporating pans for drying grapes.

9. Carson, Alfred H. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1893, no. 503,899.) Patents Room

Combination of a furnace, a chimney, and a hot air chamber above the furnace and around the chimney, containing the fruit-drying compartment.

10. Chappell, Abner M. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1893, no. 511,504.) Patents Room

A series of connected steam chambers.

11. Chrisman, Campbell E. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1893, no. 497,308.) Patents Room

Comprised of a drier casing with a rotary reel carrying the trays in pairs.

12. Colby, George E. Examination of California prunes, apricots, plums, and nectarines. (University of California.—Agricultural Experiment Station, Annual report, Sacramento, 1892-93, p. 257-274.) VPG

Reprint of University of California Experiment Station Bulletin no. 101.

Extensive investigations of the chemical composition of prunes, apricots, plums, and nectarines.

13. Monteith, Jabus H. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1893, no. 508,113.) Patents Room

Combination of steam and hot air currents for carrying off moisture from trays of fruit arranged in stacks.

14. Richmond, Mary J. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1893, no. 507,846.) Patents Room

Erection of a portable closure on the floor of a room in which a wall and the ceiling will form one side and top of such closure. Designed to enclose fruit-containing trays, cook stove, and smoke stack.

15. Sebastian, Charles. Fruit-evaporator. (United States Patents, 1893, no. 506,377.)
Patents Room

Heater with a hot air drum having an outlet and inlet pipe for fresh air. Includes a rotary blower and a lifting device for the trays.

16. Soverhill, Charles W. Fruit-evaporator. (United States Patents, 1893, no. 506,651.)
Patents Room

Steam heating device for heating and drying air that is caused to circulate through the fruit by action of a fan.

See also earlier patent: 1892, no. 468,731.

17. Sperl, Antonin. Portable fruit-evaporator. (United States Patents, 1893, no. 489,168.)
Patents Room

Stack arrangement of trays of fruit to be evaporated by dry artificial heat.

1894

18. Clark, Cullen B. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1894, no. 522,649.)
Patents Room

An evaporator consisting of a steam generator and a superposed evaporating chamber connected by a steam pipe.

19. Coulter, Joseph M. Steam fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1894, no. 530,506.)
Patents Room

Comprising a boiler, hollow steam pans one on top of the other, and steam circulating pipe connections. Good air circulation.

20. Duval, Jennie P. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1894, no. 512,100.)
Patents Room

Evaporator to be suspended over a cook stove.

21. Sampson, David E. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1894, no. 523,686.)
Patents Room

Currents of heated air penetrate perforated trays which are carried through the evaporating compartment.

1895

22. Alwood, William B. The utilization of unmerchantable apples. (Virginia.—Agricultural Experiment Station, Bulletin 57, Blacksburg, 1895, p. 145-160.)
VPG

Gives cost of construction and operation of the Alwood steam evaporator. Prohibitive for practical use.

23. Bailey, Liberty Hyde. Evaporated raspberries in western New York. (Cornell University Agricultural Experiment Station, Bulletin 100, Ithaca, N. Y., 1895, p. 1-40.)
VQK p. box 2

History of the evaporator industry in western New York. Paper chiefly devoted to a detailed description of the then widely used Culver-Cassidy tower or stack evaporator.

24. Blanchard, Kirk S. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1895, no. 541,652.)
Patents Room

Apron-evaporator. Blasts of hot air blown through the trunk over a series of endless aprons.

25. Gibson, Frank W. Process of drying fruit. (United States Patents, 1895, no. 539,258.)
Patents Room

Devoted to the processes of preparing fruit to be dried, dipping into a hot solution of bi-carbonate of soda, prunes, plums, etc.

26. Legler, L. Die Bestimmung von Zinc in getrockneten Aepfeln. (Chemiker Zeitung, Cöthen, Jahrg. 19, Semester 2, 1895, p. 1763.)
†VOA

27. Ueber zinkhaltige Aepfel. (Chemiker-Zeitung, Cöthen, Jahrg. 19, Semester 2, 1895, p. 1757.)
†VOA

Discusses use of zinc in the dried-apple industry in the United States. Gives methods for detecting zinc.

1896

28. Corbett, L. C. Raspberries. (West Virginia.—Agricultural Experiment Station, Bulletin 48, Fairmont, 1896, p. 454-464.)
VPZ

It is possible that this is the first writing of reference no. 67.

29. Wiley, Harvey Washington. Zinc in evaporated apples. (United States.—Chemistry Division, Bulletin 48, Washington, 1896, p. 1-36.)
VPH

Pure aluminum or well-tinned iron wire is recommended as a substitute for zinc. Careful investigation of 23 samples.

1897

30. Fleckenstein, Adam. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1897, no. 584,817.)
Patents Room

A drier compartment with plurality of removable shelves adapted to slide up and down, and means to elevate said trays. A furnace under the drier compartment.

31. Fleckenstein, Charles. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1897, no. 584,818.)
Patents Room

Trays stacked one on top of another with means of elevating all except the lower one, to permit the removal of the latter.

32. Hedrick, U. P. Prunes in Oregon. (Oregon.—Agricultural Experiment Station, Bulletin 45, Corvallis, 1897, p. 1-127.)
VPG

Descriptions of six evaporating plants used for prunes, only two of which have survived.

33. Ryder, Benjamin L. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1897, no. 592,256.)
Patents Room

For fruits, vegetables, cereals, seeds, herbs, and animal-food products. Stack form of evaporator, with hood for container of bleaching or color-setting chemicals.

1898

34. Allen, R. D. The prune and the methods of evaporation. (Oregon.—Board of Horticulture, Fifth biennial report, Salem, 1898, p. 485-493.) VQB

35. Beck, Thomas. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1898, no. 607,209.)

Patents Room

Heating furnace and flues in the lower part; a central chamber having a rotary fan; tray supports exterior to said chamber; escape flue in the top.

36. Blackburn, Allen H. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1898, no. 597,257.)

Patents Room

A stack drying-chamber with a rotary post for supporting and moving fruit trays.

37. Brackett, G. B. Utilizing surplus fruit. (United States.—Agricultural Department, Yearbook, Washington, 1898, p. 309-317.) VPZ

Purely general discussion.

38. Card, Fred W. Bush-fruits. New York: Macmillan Co., 1898. xii, 537 p. 12°.

R-VQK

See p. 54-55, 77-99, 120-121.

Has incorporated Prof. L. H. Bailey's account of the history of the dried raspberry industry together with the descriptions of the kinds of evaporators in most common use. See reference no. 23.

39. Dosch, Henry E. Fruit evaporation. (Oregon.—Horticultural Board, 5th biennial report, Salem, 1898, p. 440-446.) VQB

Concerned with the evaporation of prunes and devoted to criticisms of incorrect practices.

40. Steevens, George A. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1898, no. 599,647.)

Patents Room

A furnace room with a central air space.

1899

41. Browne, C. A., jr. A chemical study of the apple and its products. (Pennsylvania.—Agricultural Department, Bulletin 58, Harrisburg, 1899, p. 1-46.) VPZ

Five pages devoted to discussion of the chemical composition of evaporated apple in comparison with the fresh fruit.

42. Chase, Stephen H. Fruit-drying tray. (United States Patents, 1899, no. 635,423.)

Patents Room

Drying by exposure to sun and atmosphere. The tray has ventilating open-slat bottom and ventilating openings in the sides.

43. Kurtz, Clinton J. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1899, no. 625,778.)

Patents Room

Comprised of a framework and circular trackway fixed thereon, of a revolvable wheel or ring mounted on said trackway on which is mounted a second track. The second track turns the tray-holders, at the same time lowering and raising the trays in their holders.

See also earlier patent: 1894, no. 515,343.

44. McClatchey, Edgar. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1899, no. 639,755.)

Comprises a fire-proof building, air opening, ventilators, a furnace, hot-air pipes, and endless conveyor-belts.

45. Mitcham, William. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1899, no. 620,793.)

Patents Room

Drying trays to be automatically shifted through the drier from top to bottom.

46. Schneider, Edward F. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1899, no. 628,212.)

Patents Room

Reticulated trays, and currents of hot air passing through the trays. Levers acting so that all but lower tray may be raised while that is removed.

1900

47. Giersbach. Kartoffel-Trockenapparat. (Deutsche landwirtschaftliche Presse, Berlin, Jahrg. 28, Halbjahr 2, p. 754.) † VPA

48. Larson, John Lemuel. Fruit-drying apparatus. (United States Patents, 1900, no. 649,318.)

Patents Room

Relates to that class of driers in which the article to be dried is held within a drying-room under dead heat and dried by condensing the vapor drawn off therefrom and carrying the products of condensation to a point outside the drying chamber.

See also patent: 1900, no. 649,319.

49. Parsons, Thomas F. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1900, no. 640,936.)

Patents Room

Steam-drier. Provides for return of condensed steam to boiler.

50. Shaw, G. W. The Oregon prune; its composition, soil, draught. (Oregon.—Agricultural Experiment Station, Bulletin 61, Corvallis, 1900, p. 1-18.) VPG

51. Thompson, Edward. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1900, no. 642,177.)

Patents Room

A separate current of air for each drying compartment with equal distribution of hot air. Perforated or sieve-bottomed trays and tray controlled valves.

1901

52. Smith, Mahlon A. Fruit-drying apparatus. (United States Patents, 1901, no. 686,837.)

Patents Room

A combination of a drying chamber, a heating chamber, and conveyers to carry the fruit.

53. Thannheimer. Drier for the manufacture of split peas. (American miller, Chicago, v. 29, 1901, p. 148.) † VTA

54. Thomas, Erastus N., and GAMALIEL L. THOMPSON. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1901, no. 683,083.) Patents Room

Stack-driers in which trays rest on one another and are inserted at upper and lower ends.

See also earlier patent: 1899, no. 617,823.

55. Banana flour. (American miller, Chicago, v. 30, 1902, p. 905.) † VTA

56. Farwell, F. G., and others. Notes on the drying and evaporating of fruit and vegetables. (Bath and West of England Society and Southern Counties Association, Journal, London, series 4, v. 12, 1901-02, p. 89-107.) VPA

Gnom and Invicta drying machines used.

57. Kellner, Volhard und Honcamp. Zusammensetzung und Verdanlichkeit der getrockneten Kartoffeln. (Deutsche landwirtschaftliche Presse, Berlin, Jahrg. 29, Halbjahr 2, 1902, p. 691.) †† VPA

1903

58. Henkle, George W. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1903, no. 736,849.) Patents Room

Plurality of superimposed trays rest in supporting framework, through which air is caused to rise. Includes a means of raising all the shelves except the lowest so as to remove the lowest without interference.

59. Keyes, Winfield S. Process of desiccating fruit. (United States Patents, 1903, no. 732,563.) Patents Room

Includes the step of drying the fruit, or vegetable, or other water-containing article, by the use of an anhydrous substance such as lime or sulphuric acid, in the presence of a vacuum.

60. Hoover, Horatio A. Fruit drier. (United States Patents, 1904, no. 769,608.) Patents Room

A tank of sheet metal, partly filled with water, to be used on a stove.

61. Lackovic, Michael August. Apparatus for desiccating potatoes. (United States Patents, 1904, no. 766,269.) Patents Room

A table with perforated top through the holes of which comes the heat (80-90 degrees) to dry the partially cooked potatoes.

62. Quarnberg, Andrew A. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1904, no. 753,737.) Patents Room

Especially for prunes. Comprises a lower chamber in which to heat the air, and a superstructure for fruit, the combination of a series of parallel drying-compartments, and alternating hot-air induction and eduction passages, constructed to guide the hot air in opposite directions.

See also earlier patent: 1903, no. 740,588.

63. Rabaté. Fabrication des conserves de viande. (Journal d'agriculture pratique, Paris, année 68, semestre 1 nouv. série, tome 7, 1904, p. 486-490.) VPA

64. Rolet. Les figues sèches. (Journal d'agriculture pratique, Paris, année 68, semestre 1 nouv. série, tome 7, 1904, p. 493-494.) VPA

65. Smith, Harry E. Fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1904, no. 749,404.)

Patents Room

For domestic use. Comprises a stand with interlocking shelves. To be used over a cookstove.

1905

66. Appareil pour la desiccation des substances pâteuses et particulièrement du lait concentré. (Le Génie civil, Paris, tome 47, 1905, p. 117.) VA

Description and illustration of machinery. To be used also for vegetables, extracts, and the like.

67. Corbett, L. C. Raspberries. (United States.—Agricultural Department, Farmers' bulletin 213, Washington, 1905, p. 1-38.) VPZ

Brief descriptions of the shaft or flue evaporator, the cabinet evaporator, and the hop-kiln drier.

68. Le Mar, Hannah A. Domestic fruit-drier. (United States Patents, 1905, no. 795,992.) Patents Room

Comprises a solid walled casing open at its bottom and front, having a detachable screen for bottom, with openings to receive shelves. All to be suspended over a cook stove.

69. Pancksch. Kartoffel-Walzen-Trocknungsapparat. (Der Praktische Maschinen-Konstrukteur. Uhlands technische Rundschau, Leipzig, Ausgabe 4, 1905, p. 96.) VDA

1906

70. Atwater, W. O., and A. P. BRYANT. Composition of American food materials. (United States.—Experiment Station Office, Bulletin 28, 1906, rev. ed., p. 1-87.)

VTT p. box 1

Includes dried fruits and a few dried vegetables.

71. Benary. Kartoffelbau und Kartoffelmehlfabrikation in dem holländischen Veenskolonien. (Zeitschrift für Spiritusindustrie, Berlin, N. F., Jahrg. 29, 1906, p. 69 F.) †† VTZA

72. Marr, Otto. Vom Trocknen. (Gesundheits-Ingenieur, München, Bd. 29, 1906, p. 749-754.) †† SPA

73. Wiedemann. Chemical engineering in the packing house. (Engineering record, New York, v. 54, 1906, p. 502-503.) VDA

1907

74. Allgemeine Erfahrungen in der Kartoffeltrocknerei und die Trockenkosten der einzelnen Verfahren. (Deutsche landwirtschaftliche Presse, Berlin, Jahrg. 34, Halbjahr 1, 1907, p. 338-339.) †† VPA

75. Dell & Sohn. Mantel für Getreide-Trockenmaschinen. (Der Praktische Maschinen-Konstrukteur: Uhlands technische Rundschau, Leipzig, Ausgabe 4, Industrie der Nahrungs- und Genussmittel, Jahrg. 1907, p. 26.) VDA

EXHIBITION OF ENGRAVINGS AFTER PAINTINGS OF THE HUDSON RIVER SCHOOL

THE Prints Division has placed on view, in Room 112 of the Central Building, as its contribution to the list of exhibitions in commemoration of the completion of the Catskill Aqueduct, a number of engravings after paintings by artists of the so-called "Hudson River School." These engravings emphasize the exhibition of original paintings of this "School" now on view at the Metropolitan Museum, and amplify it by including reproductions of works not in the Museum's collection.

Thus is illustrated the art of A. B. Durand, Thomas Doughty, J. W. Casilear, Thomas Cole, J. F. Kensett, J. F. Cropsey, Whittredge, Bierstadt, and others. But these prints tell us also of the days of the mid-nineteenth century when artists such as Smillie, Jones, Hinshelwood, and others were engraving on steel plates these reproductions of paintings which dealt with scenes in our own land. In these works there is a refreshing concern with American subjects, the daily life of the people, "the beauties of our land, both in its wilder western aspects and in the calmer beauty of rural scenery in the more closely inhabited East." It is pleasant and profitable to look back upon this period of home product and home interest.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN SEPTEMBER, 1917

DURING the month of September, 1917, there were received at the Library 15,169 volumes and 5,918 pamphlets. (These figures include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 63,394. They consulted 155,247 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 196,548.

This memorial prepared by Captain Alden Partridge, president of Norwich University, gives valuable suggestions for the training of the "citizen soldiery" applicable at this time; also data on the use of the fireship and of Greek fire; also an interesting description of the fireship invented by Uriah Brown. The proposed ship, seventy-five feet long, was to be so constructed as to float low in the water. Its sides and decks were to be protected by heavy iron plates set at such angles that no shot fired at it could strike at a greater angle than 15 degrees, thus causing the shots to ricochet without penetrating the deck or sides. The chief use of the boat was the firing of a liquid composition through tubes passing through orifices in the deck which on coming in contact with the air would instantly take fire.

AN INTRODUCTION TO A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF ASSYRIAN
AND BABYLONIAN LITERATURE

THE stories of three discoveries made in connection with the ancient world match in their uniqueness any literary inventions of the human mind; the tale of Egyptian regeneration, the record of the Babylonian and Assyrian resurrection, and the chronicle of the refinding of Crete. For many years the first of these held sway over the interests and the imagination of students and readers. It was the earliest in the field, — Champollion wrote his celebrated "Lettre à Monsieur S. Dacis" in 1822; and through the politics of Napoleon, Egypt had been brought prominently within the circle of European concern. It was the first glimpse had by the thoughtful world into a past beyond that of Greece and Palestine; and the novelty of it all stung to the quick the imagination of thoughtful readers as well as of students. The strange hieroglyphics had yielded up their secrets; the picture writing on the wall, on stone and wood, and on textile had been made responsive; the halo of the Nile had cast its spell over those that had approached it, and antiquarians reveled in the wealth of old things upturned.

Upon the other hand, our knowledge of Cretan civilization is so new and so fragmentary that one hardly dare speak of it in the same breath with Egyptian and Babylonian affairs; but as Mr. Evans' confrères give out more and more of its sealed wisdom, an equally astonishing vista is opened to us of an old European civilization standing at the gateway that leads to the East and which may be either the pre- or the after-lude of that eastern world.

Between the older interest in Egypt and the younger in Crete stands that in Babylonia and Assyria. The interest in these two countries had been upheld continuously because of frequent references to them in the Bible. Egypt had, it is true, a similar association; but apart from the sojourn there of the Children of Israel and their Exodus, references to that country in prophet, psalmist, and historian are few in number. On the other hand, the older part of the scene upon which the tragic history of the People of the Book was enacted, lay just in the country "between the two rivers." Paradise — the earthly one — was situated there; and when one thought of the country one remembered the expulsion from that scene of idyllic delights, the first attempts of man to conform himself to the needs of a non-Paradise world, the early history of the Hebrews there, the many interests that in later time dragged the Assyrian plowshare over the ground of Palestine and finally the settlement in that land of sufficient numbers of Jews so as to make long-lived settlements there.

What had become of that country? Strange as it may seem, nearly every vestige of its once pulsating life had been covered up and hidden. Where were the great cities of Nineveh and Babylon? Where were their palaces, their streets, their dwelling places? The very talkative Xenophon — who lived within a couple of hundred years of Nineveh's downfall — passed over where the city had been. He has absolutely nothing to say about it; he did not even notice the vestiges of a city there. The truth is that after the fall of the Assyrian empire, when the Scythian hordes, with a ruthlessness equaled only in the twentieth century, destroyed the cities and ruined the temples, the sand of the desert was piled up by the wind upon these ruins and completely covered their traces. Since 606 B. C. they had lain there waiting their earthly resurrection.

But the same wind that had blown the sand upon these ruins was apt, also, to blow it off again. Travellers in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries brought back tales of walls uncovered here, of streets disclosed there. They told of strange characters which they could not read engraven upon rocks and bricks, — and of buildings, the meanings of which passed their comprehension. To the more serious minded among them there was evidence on every hand of an advanced civilization; and some pokings into these ruins gave the clue to the nomad Arabs in the region to get bricks and household vessels from the many "tells" (mounds) that covered the whole district. But, while the topical study of this ancient habitat was going apace, the scholarly world was ashamed to confess that the inscriptions and writings to be seen upon the walls and upon the most varied objects remained unreadable. It was not until the nineteenth century that the erudite Georg Friedrich Grotefend (1802) discovered the key to a later product of this group that had been found in the ruins of Persepolis, capital of the ancient kingdom of Persia; and it was hoped that, working backwards, it might be possible to unravel the mysteries of the older Assyria and Babylonia. Such a hope was well justified, — nor was it belied. The Persepolis inscriptions, quite evidently, were in three different languages, represented by three different kinds of one and the same script; the first was the language used by the old Persian builders of the palaces; the third was known, from a comparison with the inscriptions found in the ruins of Babylon, to be Babylonian; while the second has been called by various names, — Median, “Scythian, Susian, Amardian, Elamitic, Anzanian and Neo-Susian.”

But, during the first quarter of the nineteenth century, a young English officer, forced by his military duties, to live in the mountains of Persia — the later Sir Henry Rawlinson — had been working upon exactly the same lines as had Grotefend, though the one was quite unknown to the other. He had succeeded in deciphering a good part of the tri-lingual inscription of Darius “the great” upon the rocks of Behistun, his work being completed by the Irishman Hincks and the Frenchman Oppert.

It needed nothing more than this beginning to start the deciphering of all the inscriptions so far known. And with this deciphering there grew up the added interest in all that had taken place in this land of the two rivers, — interest to students of archaeology, of history, of religion, of literature, and of economics. Not only did many individual explorers spend their time going down into the earth in search of further knowledge concerning these interesting lands; but, beginning with the year 1842, a series of expeditions has been sent from various countries which have uncovered a good deal of ground in Mesopotamia and which give indication of what may still be found when archaeological work there will once more be possible. Such were the French expedition under Botta in that year; the English under Layard, 1845–50; a second French one under Place, 1851–55; a third French one under Oppert, 1852–54; English ones again under Taylor in 1854, under Loftus, under Sir Henry Rawlinson, under George Smith in 1873, and under Hormuzd Rassam in 1878; a fourth French one under de Sarzec in 1876; an American one under John P. Peters of the University of Pennsylvania in 1887, which was prolonged during four different campaigns until 1900; and finally the important German ones carried on during the first fourteen years of the present century (1902+). A really tremendous mass of material has been gotten in this manner, — tablets, brick, statues, utensils of all sorts, etc., etc.; and the bringing of this material to Europe and America has set an array of students at work which, regarding its number and its achievements, may well vie with those of any other branch of human learning.

It is certainly not overstepping the mark to say that the deciphering and understanding of all this material have revolutionized many of our theories and notions connected with antiquity in general and with the past of the Semitic lands in particular. It has been well said that "when history commenced, the inhabitants of Babylonia were already highly civilized," i. e., when, according to our notion the early life of peoples began a widely and deeply developed civilization already existed in Babylonia, which forces us to put the beginnings of things very much further back than we had ever imagined.

It is not only in its extension that this knowledge is so valuable. It is equally so in its perfectness and thoroughness. We have vastly more of the actual implements, the actual and the spiritual life of these ancient peoples, than we have of the Greeks and Romans. The materials that the peoples in Mesopotamia used were so much more durable and were so much better preserved by the dryness of the climate that this was bound to occur, even if no stories concerning the libraries in Babylonia and Assyria similar to those told about the libraries of Alexandria have come down to us. In Mesopotamia there existed no papyrus plant as there did in Egypt. The use of vellum was entirely unknown. But there were unending amounts of fine clay, — especially in the more southern portions of the land. People bent down and took this clay, fashioning it into tablets of very varying size upon which they impressed with a three cornered stylus their writing which, in course of time had developed from a poor picture script into one composed of wedge marks indented in various directions and from which the script takes its name "cuneiform." These tablets were dried either in the sun or in a kiln; and when the latter course obtained, they became practically indestructible except through malice and with intent. As I have said, such tablets were of every form, — square, oblong and round; the smallest less than an inch square, the largest as much as fifteen inches. For works of a more important character the clay was fashioned into other and various forms, — into cylinders, into pentagonal, heptagonal, octagonal or decagonal prisms and the like. Nor were these peoples content with writing upon clay only. They made use of stone also, upon which one is tempted to say they also wrote; for upon all buildings which kings and rulers erected they managed to put somehow or somewhere a record of their doings, — not only upon the bricks with which the building was erected, but also upon the slabs of stone used and upon the bulls that so often decorated the entrances to such buildings. And so intent were they that the knowledge of their greatness should descend to the ears of future generations that they buried the accounts of their doings — we should often call them misdoings — in the corner-stones of such buildings, so that they have come down to us exactly in the state in which they were inserted.

From Babylonia this system of writing extended into most of the surrounding countries. So extensive have been the finds that we can look into the house and street life of the inhabitants. We have their letters, their school-books, their school slates (if I may use such a term), their reports, personal and official, and hundreds of thousands of their accounts. We get into intimate connection with them in their daily life and have no need to rely upon the vague and uncertain reports that have come down to us from other and stranger sources.

More than this, we have recovered a part of their vast literature, — perhaps only a small part, but yet one that shows us how much stock they laid upon literary expression and how prominent a part it must have played among the better portion of the population. Even collections of documents were not unknown; often we find them hoarded together in the excavations made; and one king at least went further and brought together a library of the literary productions of his people. His name was Assurbanipal. He ruled about the year 668 B. C. How many sided this literature was may be seen at a glance; much of it was in poetic form, the metres of which we are just beginning to understand. Thus we have the various creation and cosmology myths, — in which many scholars see the background for the story of the creation in our Bible; the myth of Adapa, which belongs to the same category as our story of Adam and Eve in Paradise; the wonderful Gilgamesh epic in twelve tablets with its story of the Deluge and which is undoubtedly the original of our Biblical poem; the tale of the descent of Ishtar, the goddess of love, to Hades, the land of the dead, in search of Tammuz, the beloved of her youth. Then we have large collections of hymns, prayers, — beautiful in expression and so often beautiful in thought that we are unconsciously led to think of the Hebrew Psalms. We have also incantations to the various gods and goddesses, on a lower level of theology than the preceding, but evidence of the immense and strong hold religion has always had upon the peoples of the near-east. Some fragments even of wisdom literature and of ethical considerations have come down to us which show that ethical vision was not unknown to these ancients.

Perhaps even more important in many ways is the historical and judicial literature, which must have been of very large extent and a goodly share of which has been saved for us, so that we may read and study it at our leisure. The historical literature is of various kinds, beginning with ordinary building inscriptions and display inscriptions on rocks, through the elaborate annals prepared by each king, up to a set of chronicles, and even what has well been termed a synchronous history of the country. Actual annals seem to commence with the fourteenth century B. C.; though we have reliable historical data that go back to the first dynasty of Babylon, ca. 2500 B. C. Yet even this is not the oldest point upon which we can fix our gaze. Relying upon a statement made by a late Babylonian king, Nabunaid (which need not be questioned), we know that he discovered in the year 550 B. C. a foundation stone of a very early king, which stone takes us back into the fifth millennium B. C.

That these historical writings were regarded also from a literary point of view is evident from their wording and from the general form in which they are couched. Yet another intent ran through their composition, which intent is just as self-evident. They were meant to laud the kings who had them written and to elevate in men's minds the dynasties to which these kings belonged. Accordingly at times they lack complete truth, as surely as do many historical documents of our very own days. A son will take upon his brow some of the glories that ought to rest upon that of his father. Battles, revolutions — of which we know from other sources — will be concealed; and, as regards the numbers slain or prisoners taken in a battle, an Assyrian king is just as liable to prate unduly as is his modern counterpart. The various editions through which some of the annals have passed — editions which have come down to us — clearly show the accumulations gathered by the roadside. Prof. Olmstead, in his interesting study of Assyrian Historiography, says: "But what shall we say as to the accuracy of numbers in our documents when one edition gives the total slain in a battle as 14,000, another as 20,500, the next as 25,000, and the last as 29,000?... What shall we say when we find that the reviser has transformed a booty of 1,235 sheep in his original into a booty of 100,125?... So when Sennacharib tells us that he took from little Judah no less than 200,150 prisoners, and that in spite of the fact that Jerusalem itself was not captured, we may deduct the 200,000 as a product of the fancy of the Assyrian scribe, accept the 150 as somewhere near the actual number captured and carried off." Both Babylonia and Assyria were not less human than our modern Europeans!

As important as is the historical is the law literature of these old peoples. I do not refer simply to records of legal decisions, nor to business contracts, properly attested, signed and sealed, just as we write them to-day, revealing an evident love and desire that the forms of law should be duly and properly remembered. I am referring to laws specified and ordered and set out in proper and technical form. Fragments of such laws were found in the great collection at the British Museum, and published by Meissner in 1890. In 1892 he published further some old "private laws" of Babylon and concluded from internal reasons that they went back to some earlier code which Delitzsch, from historical considerations, connected with the greatest of the older Babylonian kings, Hammurabi, who lived somewhere in the neighborhood of the year 2260 B. C. The story continues to be as interesting as many such stories are. Some few years later — in December, 1901 — De Morgan, excavating at Susa, the ancient capital of Persia, came upon three large fragments of a block of black diorite, forming a quarter part of a stele that must have been some 2.25 metres in height. At the top of one side was a representation of this very king Hammurabi — of whom Delitzsch had thought — receiving a code of laws from the seated sun-god Shamash, much in the same fashion as the ancient Hebrews believed their Moses had received one from Jehovah. Then followed a judicial code which, when complete, is estimated to have contained "forty-nine columns of four thousand lines and about eight thousand words." Another scholar, Scheil, soon found that the fragments published by Meissner were in reality portions of the code copied from this very stele.

The story connected with this find is not only interesting as one of discovery. — the stele had been captured when the old Elamites made a raid upon Babylon and carried it off from the temple of Marduk in which it stood to their own city of Susa, where it waited some 4,000 years to be excavated by the Frenchmen who set it up in Paris. It is a great landmark in the history of civilization. The code deals with all possible relations of life in a sober and most enlightened manner. Not without reason has it been called "the oldest code of laws in the world." This in itself is of moment; but, when we consider also that it bears definite relation to the code of Moses, we can see that the Pentateuchal laws did not stand alone in ancient times, but that they were part and parcel of a system of law which the near-east had developed at so early a date as this. In one of his closing paragraphs, King Hammurabi says: "In the days that are to come, for ever and ever, the king who is in the land shall attend to the words of righteousness which I have written upon my monument. . . . He shall rule his subjects, pronounce judgment, give decisions, drive the wicked and evil doers from the land, and promote his people's prosperity." And then he proceeds to call down the curses of all the great gods and goddesses upon such as should "not heed his words" . . . curses which have a very ominous sound just at this moment of the world's history.

The influence of Babylonia and of Assyria is seen not only in the state power that they built up, but in the fact that it was they and not their competitors the Egyptians who furnished the international script for the hither-Asia of those days. This is clearly proven by the individual cuneiform documents found in various mounds in Palestine, at Tell-el-Hesi (Lachish) by Bliss in 1891, at Taanak by Sellin in 1902, at Gezer by Macalister in 1904; and most especially by the great find in 1888 at Tell-el-Amarna in Egypt. At this last place more than three hundred tablets were discovered by a woman hunting for antiques in what had been the palace of the great heretic king Amenophis the Fourth (ca. 14 B. C.). Unfortunately their importance was not recognized at the moment, and they journeyed several times between Cairo and the chief capitals of Europe. Many were destroyed, some were intentionally broken up to be sold to tourists and finally about three hundred, more or less damaged, went to grace public and private collections. The importance of these tablets will be recognized when it is remembered that they contain the correspondence of governors sent by Amenophis the Third and the Fourth to rule over Palestine, Phenicia and Syria at the very time when the Hittites and the Khabiri (by some supposed to be the Hebrews) were breaking up this great colonial empire of Egypt in the north.

The influence of these Assyrians had proceeded even further up into Asia Minor into that part which was afterwards known as Cappadocia. In their attempts to found a Pan-Assyrian empire the kings ruling at Nineveh had planted their armies up to the Aegean Sea, — just as their regal vanity has left the signs of their coming upon the rocks overlooking the Sea and the Mediterranean. Yet, though they did not succeed, their cultural influence did extend into Asia Minor, into the very centre of the important Hittite power. Not only are there tablets from Arzawa in the Tell-el-Amarna group, but a number have been found also in Kara-Üjük and in Boghaz Koi (1600 B. C.); which shows us that by the side of the real Hittite script used by rulers for inscriptional and adornment purposes, the script of Assyria was the medium of intercourse in the Hittite country itself. Who these Hittites were we do not know exactly as yet. They have left us in southern Syria a large number of royal inscriptions carved on stone — for the most part in relief — in a hieroglyphic script, the key to which, strangely, has not yet been found. That these Hittites were of importance, that they represented a power which both Egypt and Assyria had to count and were so often at odds with, — of all this there can be no doubt. They are first mentioned on Egyptian inscriptions coming from the eighteenth dynasty (1503–1449 B. C.); and they disquieted the Egyptian colonial power by continually pressing forward from Cappadocia. From all that we know we can say that at an early date they formed a large empire extending from the Orontes to the Aegean Sea; and just as they had come into contact with the Egyptians to the south, so also they collided with the Assyrians when later they endeavored to push their arms too far towards the west. From what has just been said it will be seen that much remains in doubt in regard to these Hittites, — concerning their racial and historical connections. But still greater doubt attaches itself to the particular portion of the Hittite people who were called in the inscriptions Mitanni. They also came into conflict with the Egyptians; and in the Tell-el-Amarna tablets we have despatches that passed between them and the Hittite kings. The mystery becomes still deeper when we find that the names of the six Mitanni kings which have been handed down to us are all difficult of connection philologically with Semitic roots, but bear a strange likeness to Aryan ones. If we add to this that among the divinities of these peoples were such Aryan gods as Indra, Varuna and Mythra, we are led to conclude that we are here dealing with Aryan rather than with a Semitic people. The future that lies upon the lap of the gods must instruct us on our way through these intricacies of fact and through these dilemmas of explanation.

Of all these varied interests — private, collective and state — the works and articles listed in the following catalogue treat. It will be seen at a glance that the collection is a comprehensive one and — so far as is humanly possible — a pretty complete one; and yet not so complete as the Library authorities will have wished. Naturally, since the middle of 1914, the quiet intercourse of libraries and booksellers, as well as of scholars, has been woefully disturbed. Recent publications in the enemy countries and in the semi-enemy lands are entirely absent, — if any have been brought out. For that the Library is not responsible; where that responsibility lies it is not for the writer to say at this place.

The excellences of the catalogue — and I trust that it has some — are due to the untiring, painstaking and accurate work of my assistant, Miss Pratt, to whom I wish in this somewhat public manner to express my thanks.

J. CARROLL BECKWITH MEMORIAL EXHIBITION

THE recent death of J. Carroll Beckwith has occasioned another one of the Prints Division's usual memorial exhibitions. About two dozen of the artist's drawings have been placed on view in the Stuart Gallery. Presented by the artist himself some years ago, they may be considered a representative showing of his activity in a field of work which he considered of basic importance in art, — draughtsmanship.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of October, 1917, the Library received a total of 1,620 volumes, 4,883 pamphlets, 345 maps and 2 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following: — From the "República de Estatística e Archivo do Estado de São Paulo," Brazil, were received a collection of official publications of São Paulo, Brazil, comprising 155 volumes and 19 pamphlets, and from the "Instituto Historico e Geographico de São Paulo," 19 volumes of their "Revista." From Mr. C. F. Richards of New York came a collection of publications relating to philately, containing 52 volumes, 870 pamphlets, and 52 circulars.

Mr. William Jean Beauley gave a copy of his etching "The City Gate"; Mr. John W. Evans of Brooklyn, a copy of his wood-engraving after the portrait of Thomas A. Edison by J. E. Kelly; and Mr. Thomson Price of New York, a photograph of the New York Reservoir, built by his grandfather, Thomson Price, in 1842.

From Miss Grace Bigelow, Highland Falls, N. Y., came a collection of public documents and miscellaneous material, comprising 16 volumes and 118 pamphlets; from Mr. William A. Chapman, Montreal, P. Q., a copy of his work, "Chronicles of the Class of 1873, Rutgers College," 1917; from Dr. Pedro Castro Escalada, Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic, a copy of his work in two volumes, "Curieterapia (Radiumterapia)," Buenos Aires, 1915-1916; from Mr. Desmond Fitzgerald, Brookline, Mass., a copy of his work, "Dodge Macknight, water color painter," Brookline, 1916 (privately printed); and from Mr. E. A. Posselt of Philadelphia, two copies of his work, "Wool, cotton, silk from fibre to finished fabric, covering both woven and knit goods (Posselt's Textile Library, volume 9)."

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN OCTOBER, 1917

DURING the month of October, 1917, there were received at the Library 26,646 volumes and 5,483 pamphlets. (These figures include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 69,112. Visitors to the Building numbered 231,385.

BULLETIN
NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

VOLUME 21

DECEMBER 1917

NUMBER 12

AT the meeting of the Board of Trustees held December 12, Mr. Lewis Cass Ledyard was elected President of the Board to fill the vacancy in that office caused by the death of Mr. Rives.

MR. FREDERICK STURGES, a member of the Board of Trustees since the foundation of The New York Public Library in 1895, and before that time a Trustee of the Lenox Library, died at his residence in this city, Saturday evening, December 22, in the 85th year of his age.

EXHIBITIONS

THE death of Auguste Rodin gave occasion to a little memorial exhibition in the Stuart Gallery, on view during December. From the Avery Collection were drawn the sculptor's interesting dry-point portraits of Victor Hugo and others; the Hays bequest furnished an original drawing in color, and photographs of the important collection of Rodin's sculptures at the Metropolitan Museum completed the exhibition.

At the same time there were shown in the Stuart Gallery, Joseph Pennell's lithographs illustrating war work in America. His grasp of essentials, his sure eye for the picturesque, his contact with the varied interests of the world about him, appear again in these new prints.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of November, 1917, the Library received as gifts a total of 2,802 volumes, 5,854 pamphlets, 29 maps and 56 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of the gifts were the following: From Mr. Clarence Morgan of Shelburne, Vt., the Library received a framed chart, — the original articles of organization of the General News Association of the City of New York (now the Associated Press), with autograph signatures of the seven members (Hallock, Hale & Hallock; J. Watson Webb; James G. Bennett; Charles A. Dana; Moses S. Beach; J. & E. Brooks; Henry J. Raymond) dated New York, October 21, 1856.

From Mr. James Hilton Manning of Albany, N. Y., came the two volumes of his work, — a "Century of American savings banks," New York, 1917; from Mrs. Robert W. de Forest of New York a copy of her privately printed work, — "John Taylor; a Scottish merchant of Glasgow and New York, 1752-1833; a family narrative written for his descendants by Emily Johnston de Forest," New York, 1917; and from Mr. Sherman Williams of New York a copy of the "History of the Forty-ninth New York Volunteers; compiled by Frederick David Bidwell," Albany, 1916.

From the Biblioteca Nacional of Chile we received a collection of books relating to the history, industries and literature of Chile, including government documents, in all 302 volumes and 91 pamphlets; and from the Pan American Union, Washington, D. C., 855 copies of pamphlets describing the Latin American republics: Bolivia, Ecuador, Paraguay, Peru, Guatemala, and Panama.

Mr. John Jay Chapman of New York gave a copy of his "Ode on the sailing of our troops for France," Nov., 1917; Mr. R. A. F. Penrose, jr., of Philadelphia, six copies of his work, — "What a geologist can do in war," prepared for the Geological Committee of the National Research Council, Philadelphia, 1917; from Mr. Charles Howland Russell came a collection of miscellaneous material, containing 98 volumes, 263 pamphlets, 2 prints, 3 photographs, etc.; and from the Company of Gentlemen Adventurers, Peace Dale, Rhode Island, came a copy of their privately printed book, — "The steel flea; translated from the Russian of Nikolai Semyonovitch Lyeskoff by Isabel F. Hapgood," Boston, 1916.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN NOVEMBER, 1917

DURING the month of November, 1917, there were received at the Library 25,283 volumes and 7,616 pamphlets. (These figures include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 73,063. They consulted 182,191 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 244,835.

While this list of recent additions includes books on the general subject as well as on sculpture in various countries, a considerable proportion of the titles deals with American work.

Barnard's Lincoln. The gift of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Taft to the city of Cincinnati; the creation and dedication of George Grey Barnard's statue of Abraham Lincoln, including the address of William Howard Taft. Cincinnati: Stewart & Kidd, 1917. 66 p. illus. 8°. MGO

Bennett, T. P. The relation of sculpture to architecture. Cambridge: University Press, 1916. xii, 204 p. illus. 8°. MRX

"Of real service. Refreshingly free from vague and wordy generalities and the... 'higher criticism.' The relation of one art to the other can never be harmonious unless there be sympathetic and scholarly collaboration." — W. A. John, in Journal of the Royal Institute of British Architects, Dec. 23, 1916, p. 57-60.

"In all the greatest periods of their history, architecture and sculpture have gone hand in hand... It is only a logical outcome of the guiding influence of one master-mind over the planning, design and ornamentation of the building that each harmonises with the other, and that sculpture is not only good as sculpture, but good as decoration also... in sympathy with its surroundings... The inflated importance placed in recent years upon originality of any kind has led to... sculptured figures which... [are] the result of freakish ideas... The careful examination of all available examples must reveal certain more or less definite facts which will act as a basis for individual study and save a large amount of fruitless search for useful information... The author has collected examples of the various features under discussion, classified them, and made deductions of certain facts which seem to be established." — Introduction.
